SUBSCRIPTIONS AND THEIR APPLICATION.

The only qualification for Membership is an annual subscription of at least TEN SHILLINGS, and for Associates ONE SHILLING.

These subscriptions are intended to aid the Council of the Society:—

1. To publish, at a cheap rate, elementary books from which to learn the Language, and Irish books for Irish-speaking districts.

2. To offer competition premiums to classes and individuals, for composition in Irish, and translation into that Language.*

3. To pay or otherwise reward teachers who will have classes of at least ten pupils learning the Language.

4. And if sufficient funds be contributed, to publish a cheap weekly journal partly in the Irish Language.

If even one person in every three in Ireland, who may fairly be expected to sympathise with this movement, would practically aid it by the subscription of One Shilling per annum, the Society would be in receipt of funds sufficient to enable them to carry out all their objects.

“Collecting Cards” for the above purposes will be sent, on application to the Secretary of the Society, to those who are willing to aid by enrolling members, &c.

The Card and Subscriptions received to be returned to the Secretary, 9 Kildare-street, Dublin, who, on receipt thereof, will send a certificate of enrolment to each Subscriber. Money Orders made payable to Rev. M. H. Close and C. H. Hart, Treasurers.

“The Irish Language is free from the anomalies, sterility, and heteroclit reduncancies, which mark the dialects of barbarous nations; it is rich and melodious, it is precise and copious, and affords those elegant conversions which no other than a thinking and lettered people can use or acquire.”—VALLANCEY.

“Est quidem lingua hæc (scil. Hibernica), et elegans cum primis, et opulenta.”—ARCHIEPISCOPUS USSHER.

* The Council have already received promises of premiums to offer for competition—subjects and conditions to be specified hereafter.

PREFACE.

THE Council of the Society, perceiving the want of Irish Reading Books for advanced pupils, decided on publishing, in a cheap form, such works as would be most useful to meet this want.

Believing that prose works are the best calculated to aid the young student in the acquisition of the language, they selected from the publications of the Ossianic Society the following prose tale, which they deemed to be most suitable for this purpose. The Coruigeacht Òigarmuda agus Òríanne has the advantage of being not only the most solid and useful piece of the class of literature to which it belongs, but is also one of the best edited of the Ossianic series. Of this tale, a knowledge of which was one of the literary and legal qualifications for an ollamh or poet, O'Curry, in his lecture on the Fenian tales and poems says: "Of these (i.e., the prose tales), the only tale founded on fact, or, at least, on ancient authority (though romantically told), is one in which Finn himself was deeply concerned. It is the pursuit of Diarmaid and Grainné. The facts on which it is founded are shortly these:—

“Finn, in his old age, solicited the monarch, Cormac MacArt, for the hand of his celebrated daughter, Grainné, in marriage.

“Cormac agreed to the hero’s proposal, and invited Finn to go to Tara to obtain from the princess herself her consent (which was necessary in such matters in those days in Erin) to their union. Finn, on this invitation, proceeded to Tara, attended by a chosen body of his warriors, and among these were his son Oisín, his grandson Oscar, and Diarmaid O’Duibhné, one of his chief officers, a man of fine person and most fascinating manners.

“A magnificent feast was, of course, provided, at which the monarch presided, surrounded by all the great men of his court, among whom the Fenians were accorded a distinguished place.

“It appears to have been a custom at great feasts in ancient Erin for the mistress of the mansion, or some other distinguished lady, to fill her own rich and favourite drinking-cup or glass from a select vessel of choicest liquor, and to send it round by her own favourite maid-in-waiting to the chief gentlemen of the company, to be sent round again by them to a certain number (which was, I believe, four) in their immediate vicinity, so that everyone of those invited should in turn enjoy the distinction of participating in this gracious favour. On the present occasion the lady Grainné did the honours of her royal father's court, and sent round her favourite cup accordingly, until all had drank from it, Oisín and Diarmaid O'Duibhné alone excepted.

"Scarcely had the company uttered their praises of their liquor and their profound acknowledgments to the princess than they all, almost simultaneously, fell into a heavy sleep.

"The liquor was, of course, drugged for this purpose, and no sooner had Grainné perceived the full success of her scheme than she went and sat by the side of Oisín and Diarmaid, and, addressing the former, complained to him of the folly of his father Finn in expecting that a maiden of her youth, beauty, and celebrity could ever consent to become the wife of so old and war-worn a man; that if Oisín himself were to seek her hand she should gladly accept him; but since that could not now be, that she had no chance of escaping the evil which her father's temerity had brought upon her but by flight, and as Oisín could not dishonour his father by being her partner in such a proceeding, she conjured Diarmaid by his manliness and by his vows of chivalry to take her away, to make her his wife, and thus to save her from a fate to which she preferred even death itself.

“After much persuasion (for the consequences of so grievous an offence to his leader must necessarily be serious), Diarmaid consented to the elopement.

“The parties took a hasty leave of Oisin, and, as the royal palace was not very strictly guarded on such an occasion, Grainné found little difficulty in escaping the vigilance of her attendants and gaining the open country with her companion.

“When the monarch and Finn awoke from their trance their rage was boundless; both of them vowed vengeance against the unhappy delinquents, and Finn immediately set out from Tara in pursuit of them.

“He sent parties of his swiftest and best men to all parts of the country; but Diarmaid was such a favourite with his brethren in arms, and the peculiar circumstances of the elopement invested it with so much sympathy on the part of those young heroes, that they never could discover the retreat of the offenders, except when Finn himself happened to be of the party that immediately pursued them, and then they were sure to make their escape by some wonderful stratagem or feat of agility on the part of Diarmaid.”

This, then, was the celebrated pursuit of Diarmaid and Grainné. It extended all over Erin, and in the description of the progress of it a great amount of curious information on topography, the natural productions of various localities, social manners, and more ancient tales and superstitions, is introduced.

The flight of Diarmaid and Grainné is mentioned in several of our ancient manuscripts, and the popular traditions throughout the country point to those ancient monuments, vulgarly called cromlechs, as their resting and hiding-places, many of which are still commonly—though, of course, without reason—called Leabthacha Dhiarmada is Ghrainné, or the beds of Diarmaid and Grainné.

It was intended at first to publish the Irish text only, and thus simply to provide Irish literature for advanced students; but when the text was printed it was then considered also desirable to print the translation which accompanied it. Before, however, taking this step the question arose as to whether it would be legitimate for the Council to republish from the transactions of another Society the work of one of its authors, who was happily still living. In any case, it would be ungracious to reprint the work without informing the author and obtaining his permission. To do this led to great delay, and time had already been lost owing to other circumstances.

It is true the Society might have supplied another translation or paraphrase, and thereby have avoided mentioning the name of the original author and editor from the beginning to the end of the work; but this course would be neither right nor honourable. Nor would the fact of supplying a literal translation be a sufficient excuse, as the valuable translation of Standish H. O'Grady has been so well done that, whilst it is sufficiently literal for the class of students qualified to read it, yet it affords pleasurable interest to the general reader.

After some consideration, Professor O'Looney was instructed to communicate with Mr. O'Grady, who, in the kindest manner possible, gave his consent, and wrote as follows :—

“ October, 1879.

“ Yours of the 22nd instant reached me here this morning. I am truly sorry that you had to wait so long for an answer to your first letter. . . It was, therefore, a very long time after date that your letter found me out. The above is my permanent address. With regard to ‘ Diarmuid and Grainne,’ I have no rights of any kind in regard to my edition of that tale, so far as I know. But, even if I had, I would cheerfully waive them in favour of your Society, of whose objects I cordially approve, and would make them a present of my humble performance.”

He also agreed to read the proof-sheets. The proof-sheets were accordingly given to him, but, owing to his absence from home or some other cause, there was great delay in returning them. As there was a pressing need for the book, and as so much time had been already lost in issuing the work, the Council, at a meeting held on Tuesday, the 2nd March, 1880, passed the following resolution:—

“That the full authority of this Council be given to Mr. O’Looney to put the tale of the pursuit of Diarmaid and Grainne finally through the press.”

Professor O’Looney was especially selected to see it through the press, as he was formerly a member of the Ossianic Society and a contributor to its publications; amongst the rest he was the original translator and editor of the Laoid Oipín ar ċip na n-Og (The Lay of Oisín in the Land of the Young), which he contributed to the fourth volume of the Ossianic Society in 1859.

The portion of Diarmaid and Grainne now published consists of the first half of the original work (or Part I.), and numbers altogether 174 pages; it will be found a valuable aid to learners of the Irish language. The Council purpose publishing the remaining portion of the work.

The text; translation, and notes are the work of Mr. O’Grady; whilst the copious vocabulary and other matter contained in the appendix, &c., have been added by the Society.

Daire names and describes the guests to Grainne. 6. Grainne gives a draught to Fionn, Cormac, and others. A deep sleep comes upon them. 7. Grainne offers herself in marriage to Oisín. Refused. She puts Diarmuid under "bonds" to force him to elope with her. 8. Diarmuid remonstrates. Grainne says she had cause. 9. Which she proceeds to relate. 10. Diarmuid offers an excuse for not leaving Tara with her. Excuse not taken. 11. Grainne leaves Tara ; Diarmuid is advised by his friends to go with her. 12. Diarmuid bids farewell to his friends. His reluctance to go with Grainne. 13. They proceed by chariot to Athlone. 14. They cross the Shannon and go on foot to Doire dha bhoth. 15. Fionn and his trackers pursue Diarmuid and Grainne. 16. A hound is sent by Oisín to warn Diarmuid of approaching danger. 17. Three warning shouts to Diarmuid. 18. The Trackers find Diarmuid and Grainne in Doire. 19. Oisín and Oscar try to dissuade Fionn from going to Doire. 20. Escape of Grainne. 21. She goes with Aongus to Limerick. 22. Diarmuid, from the inside, inquires at each of the seven doors of the fort, which battalion guards each of the seven doors. With a light, airy bound he passes over the door guarded by Fionn and his Fenians beyond their ranks. He escapes. 23. He rejoins Grainne and Aongus. Aongus' six advices to Diarmuid. Muadhan, a warrior youth, offers his services to Diarmuid and Grainne. Accepted. His first service with hair, hook, and rod. 24. From a height Diarmuid sees a large, swift, fearful fleet of ships making for land towards the spot where he stands. Nine times nine of the chieftains come ashore. 25. Diarmuid learns from them that they are in pursuit of himself. He is unknown to them. Their three poisonous hounds. They number twenty hundreds of men. Diarmuid evades their questions about himself. 26. By a ruse in a challenge trial of skill he kills fifty of their men. 27. Again he evades their questions. 28. He manages to kill fifty more of their men. 29. Diarmuid returns in the evening to Grainne. Muadhan keeps watch all night. 30. Diarmuid challenges the strangers to a third feat, and thus manages to kill a third fifty. 31. Returns to Grainne. Muadhan keeps watch. 32. Diarmuid goes out in battle suit, taking his two fearful javelins with him. Grainne's dread at this sight. Goes out alone to do battle with the Green Fenians. 33. He meets them. They inquire of him about Diarmuid. Diarmuid makes himself known to them. They encounter in bloody battle. Diarmuid's swift valour. He hews them down in every direction. Only the three green chiefs and a very few of the men escape to their ships. 34. Diarmuid returns from the conflict without cut or wound. 35. Diarmuid challenges to single combat one of the three chieftains. In their mutual onslaught they are compared to two raging lions, two fearless hawks &c. 36. They wrestle. Diarmuid hurls the chieftain to the earth to which he binds him firm and fast. He encounters, overcomes, and binds the other two in like manner, and leaves them there in heavy grief. 37. He returns to Grainne. Muadhan keeps watch all night. 38. Diarmuid tells his exploits to Grainne. 39. They depart thence through fear of Fionn. They reach Slaibh Luachra and take rest by the brink of a stream. 40. A fruitless attempt is made to loose the bonds of the three chieftains. 41. Deirdre (Fionn's female messenger), with the speed of a swallow, approaches the Strangers. Discovers that it was Diarmuid who bound their chieftains. Advises to loose the poisonous hounds on his track. 42. Hounds let loose. The pursuit. 43. The youth with the green mantle. Diarmuid arms himself. 44. Muadhan's mysterious whelp-hound kills one of the poisonous hounds. 45. Diarmuid kills the second hound with his Ga-dearg. 46. He kills the third by dashing it against a rock. Kills the youth of the green mantle. Turns on his pursuers. Deirdre alone escapes the general slaughter. 47. Fionn summons all the Fenians of Erin. They go to where the chieftains are bound. No one will loose the chieftains for Fionn. They die there. Description of their graves. Fionn's grief. 48. Deirdre tells Fionn of the slaughter of the Strangers. She cannot tell whither went Diarmuid; so Fionn and the Fenians return to Almuin. 49. Diarmuid and Grainne return to Limerick. Muadhan leaves them. 50. Continuation of their wandering. Compact between Diarmuid and Searbhan. 51. Fionn and the Tuatha De Danaan warrior youths. Oisín's good advice to the youths. 52. Dispute between Aoifne and Aine. A goaling match. 53. Names of those engaged in the match. 54. Lasts three days. No goal won. Wonderful effects of the berry of a quicken-tree. 55. A giant youth of one eye guards the tree.

THE PURSUIT OF DIARMUID AND GRAINNE.

PART FIRST.

1. ON a certain day¹ that Fionn Mac Cumhaill rose at early morn in Almhuin² the broad and great of Laighean, and sat upon the grass-green plain³ without, having neither servant nor attendant by him, there followed him two of his people : that is to say, Oisín⁴ the son of Fionn, and Diorruing the son of Dobhar O'Baoisgne. Oisín spoke, and what he said was : "What is the cause of this early rising⁵ of thine, O Fionn?" quoth he. "Not without cause have I made this early rising," said Fionn; "for I am without a wife without a mate since Maighneis the daughter of Garadh glundubh mac Moirne died; for he is not wont to have slumber nor sweet sleep who happens to be without a fitting wife, and that is the cause of my early rising O Oisín." "What forceth thee to be thus?" said Oisin; "for there is not a wife nor a mate in the green-landed island⁶ Erin upon whom thou mightest turn the light of thine eyes or of thy sight, whom we would not bring by fair means or by foul to thee." And then spoke Diorruing, and what he said was: "I myself could discover for thee a wife and a mate befitting thee." "Who is she?" said Fionn. "She is Grainne the daughter of Cormac the son of Art the son of Conn of the hundred battles," quoth Diorruing, "that is, the woman that is fairest of feature and form and speech of the women of the globe together." "By thy hand, O Diorruing," said Fionn, "there is strife and variance between Cormac and myself for a long time,⁷ and I think it not good nor seemly that he should give me a refusal of marriage; and I had rather that ye should both go to ask the marriage of his daughter for me of Cormac, for I could better bear a refusal of marriage to be given to you than to myself." "We will go there," said Oisin, "though there be no profit for us there, and let no man know of our journey until we come back again."

2. After that, those two warriors went their ways, and they took farewell of Fionn,⁸ and it is not told how they fared⁹ until they reached Teamhair. The king of Erin chanced to be holding a gathering and a muster¹⁰ before them¹¹ upon the plain of Teamhair, and the chiefs and the great nobles of his people together with him; and a gentle welcome was made before Oisin and before Diorruing, and the gathering was then put off until another day; for he [i.e. the king] was certain that it was upon some pressing thing or matter that those two had come to him. Afterwards Oisin called the king of Erin to one side of the gathering, and told him that it was to ask of him the marriage of his daughter for Fionn Mac Cumhaill that they themselves were then come. Cormac spoke, and what he said was: "There is not a son of a king or of a great prince, a hero or a battle-champion in Erin, to whom my daughter has not given refusal of marriage, and it is on me that all and every one lay the reproach of that; and I will not certify you any tidings until ye betake yourselves before my daughter, for it is better that ye get her own tidings [i.e. tidings from herself] than that ye be displeased with me."

3. After that they went their ways until they reached the dwelling¹² of the women, and

Cormac sat him upon the side of the couch and of the high bed by Grainne ; and he spoke, and what he said was : “ Here are, O Grainne,” quoth he, “ two of the people of Fionn Mac Cumhaill coming to ask thee as wife and as mate for him, and what answer wouldst thou give them ?”

Grainne answered, and what she said was : “ If he be a fitting son-in-law for thee, why should he not be a fitting husband and mate for me ?” Then they were satisfied ; and after that a feast and banquet was made for them in the Grianan with Grainne and the women, so that they became exhilarated and mirthful-sounding ; and Cormac made a tryste with them and with Fionn a fortnight from that night at Teamhair.

4. Thereafter Oisín and Diórruing arrived again at Almhuin, where they found Fionn and the Fenians, and they told them their tidings from beginning to end. Now as everything wears away, so also did that space of time ; and then Fionn collected and assembled the seven battalions of the standing Fenians from every quarter¹³ where they were, and they came where Fionn was, in Almhuin the great and broad of Leinster ; and on the last day of that period of time they went forth in great bands, in troops, and in impetuous fierce impenetrable companies, and we are not told how they fared until they reached Teamhair. Cormac was before them upon the plain with the chiefs and the great nobles of the men of Erin about him, and they made a gentle welcome for Fionn and all the Fenians, and after that they went to the king's mirthful house [called] Miodhchuarta.¹⁴ The king of Erin sat down to enjoy drinking and pleasure, with his wife at his left shoulder, that is to say, Eitche, the daughter of Atan of Corcaigh, and Grainne at her shoulder, and Fionn Mac Cumhaill at the king's right hand; and Cairbre Liffeachair¹⁵ the son of Cormac sat at one side of the same royal house, and Oisín the son of Fionn at the other side, and each one of them sat according to his rank and to his patrimony from that down.

5. There sat there a druid and a skilful man of knowledge of the people of Fionn before Grainne the daughter of Cormac; that is, Daire duanach mac Morna;¹⁶ and it was not long before there arose gentle talking and mutual discourse between himself and Grainne. Then Daire duanach mac Morna arose and stood before Grainne, and sang her the songs and the verses and the sweet poems of her fathers and of her ancestors; and then Grainne spoke and asked the druid, "What is the thing or matter wherefore Fionn is come to this place to-night?" "If thou knowest not that," said the druid, "it is no wonder that I know it not." "I desire to learn it of thee," said Grainne. "Well then," quoth the druid, "it is to ask thee as wife and as mate that Fionn is come to this place to-night." "It is a great marvel to me," said Grainne, "that it is not for Oisín that Fionn asks me, for it were fitter to give me such as he, than a man that is older than my father." "Say not that," said the druid, "for were Fionn to hear thee he himself would not have thee, neither would Oisín dare to take thee." "Tell me now," said Grainne, "who is that warrior at the right shoulder of Oisín the son of Fionn?" "Yonder," said the druid, "is Goll mac Morna, the active, the warlike." "Who is that warrior at the shoulder of Goll?" said Grainne. "Oscar the son of Oisín," said the druid. "Who is that graceful-legged man at the shoulder of Oscar?" said Grainne. "Caoilte mac Ronain," said the druid. "What haughty impetuous warrior is that yonder at the shoulder of Caoilte?" said Grainne. "The son of Lughaidh of the mighty hand,¹⁷ and that man is sister's son to Fionn MacCumhaill," said the druid. "Who is that freckled¹⁸ sweet-worded man, upon whom is the curling dusky-black¹⁹ hair, and [who has] the two red²⁰ ruddy²¹ cheeks, upon the left hand of Oisín the son of Fionn?" "That man is Diarmuid²² the grandson of Duibhne, the white-toothed, of the lightsome countenance; that is, the best lover of women and of maidens that is in the whole world." "Who is that at the shoulder of Diarmuid?" said Grainne. "Diorruing the son of Dobhar Damhadh O'Baoisgne, and that man is a druid and a skilful man of science," said Daire duanach.

6. "That is a goodly company," said Grainne; and she called her attendant handmaid to her, and told her to bring to her the jewelled-golden chased goblet which was in the Grianan after her.²³ The handmaid brought the goblet, and Grainne filled the goblet forthwith, (and there used to go into it [be contained in it] the drink of nine times nine men). Grainne said, "Take the goblet to Fionn first, and bid him drink a draught out of it, and disclose to him that it is I that sent it to him."

The handmaid took the goblet to Fionn, and told him everything that Grainne had bidden her say to him. Fionn took up the goblet, and no sooner had he drunk a draught out of it than there fell upon him a stupor of sleep and of deep slumber. Cormac took the draught and the same sleep fell upon him, and Eitche, the wife of Cormac, took the goblet and drank a draught out of it, and the same sleep fell upon her as upon all the others. Then Grainne called the attendant handmaid to her, and said to her: "Take this goblet to Cairbre Lifea-chair and tell him to drink a draught out of it, and give the goblet to those sons of kings²⁴ by him." The handmaid took the goblet to Cairbre, and he was not well able to give it to him that was next to him, before a stupor of sleep and of deep slumber fell upon him too, and each one that took the goblet, one after another, they fell into a stupor of sleep and of deep slumber.

7. When Grainne found the others thus in a state of drunkenness and of trance, she rose fairly and softly from the seat on which she was, and spoke to Oisín, and what she said was: "I marvel at Fionn Mac Cumhaill that he should ask such a wife as I, for it were fitter for him to give me my own equal to marry than a man older than my father." "Say not that, O Grainne," quoth Oisín, "for if Fionn were to hear thee he would not have thee, neither would I dare to take thee." "Wilt thou receive courtship from me, O Oisín?" said Grainne. "I will not," said Oisín, "for whatsoever woman is betrothed to Fionn I would not meddle with her." Then Grainne turned her face to Diarmuid O'Duibhne, and what she said to him was: "Wilt thou receive courtship from me, O son of O'Duibhne, since Oisín receives it not from me?" "I will not," said Diarmuid, "for whatever woman is betrothed to Oisín I may not take her, even were she not betrothed to Fionn." "Then," said Grainne, "I put thee under bonds of danger and of destruction, O Diarmuid, that is, under the bonds of Dromdraoidheachta, if thou take me not with thee out of this household to-night, ere Fionn and the king of Erin arise out of that sleep?"²⁵

8. "Evil bonds are those under which thou hast laid me, O woman," said Diarmuid; "and wherefore hast thou laid those bonds upon me before all the sons of kings and of high princes in the king's mirthful house [called]

Miodchuart to-night, seeing that there is not of all those one less worthy to be loved by a woman than myself?" "By thy hand, O son of O'Duibhne, it is not without cause that I have laid those bonds on thee, as I will tell thee now.

9. "Of a day when the king of Erin was presiding over a gathering and a muster on the plain of Teamhair, Fionn, and the seven battalions of the standing Fenians, chanced to be there that day; and there arose a great goaling match²⁶ between Cairbre Liffeachair the son of Cormac, and the son of Lughaidh, and the men of Breaghmhagh,²⁷ and of Cearna,²⁸ and the stout pillars²⁹ of Teamhair arose on the side of Cairbre, and the Fenians of Erin on the side of the son of Lughaidh; and there were none sitting in the gathering that day but the king, and Fionn, and thyself, O Diarmuid. It happened that the game was going against the son of Lughaidh, and thou didst rise and stand, and tookest his caman from the next man to thee, and didst throw him to the ground and to the earth, and thou wentest into the game, and didst win the goal three times upon Cairbre and upon the warriors of Teamhair. I was that time in my Grianan of the clear view, of the blue windows of glass, gazing upon thee ; and I turned the light of mine eyes and of my sight upon thee that day, and I never gave that love to any other from that time to this, and will not for ever."

10. "It is a wonder that thou shouldst give me that love instead of Fionn," said Diarmuid, "seeing that there is not in Erin a man that is fonder of a woman than he ; and knowest thou, O Grainne, on the night that Fionn is in Teamhair that he it is that has the keys of Teamhair, and that so we cannot leave the town ?" "There is a wicket-gate³⁰ to my Grianan," said Grainne, "and we will pass out through it." "It is a prohibited thing³¹ for me to pass through any wicket-gate whatsoever," said Diarmuid. "Howbeit, I hear," said Grainne, "that every warrior and battle-champion can pass by the shafts of his javelins and by the staves of his spears, in or out over the rampart of every fort and of every town, and I will pass out by the wicket-gate, and do thou follow me so."

11. Grainne went her way out, and Diarmuid spoke to his people, and what he said was : "O Oisín, son of Fionn, what shall I do with these bonds that have been laid on me?" "Thou art not guilty of the bonds which have been laid upon thee," said Oisín, "and I tell thee to follow Grainne, and keep thyself well against the wiles of Fionn." "O Oscar, son of Oisín, what is good for me to do as to those bonds which have been laid upon me?" "I tell thee to follow Grainne," said Oscar, "for he is a sorry wretch that fails to keep his bonds." "What counsel dost thou give me, O Caoilte?" said Diarmuid. "I say," said Caoilte, "that I have a fitting wife, and yet I had rather than the wealth of the world that it had been to me that Grainne gave that love." "What counsel givest thou me, O Di-orrúing?" "I tell thee to follow Grainne, albeit thy death will come of it, and I grieve for it." "Is that the counsel of you all to me?" said Diarmuid. "It is," said Oisín, and said all the others together.

12. After that Diarmuid arose and stood, and stretched forth his active warrior hand over his broad weapons, and took leave and farewell of Oisín and of the chiefs of the Fenians; and not bigger is a smooth-crimson whortleberry than was each tear that Diarmuid shed from his eyes at parting from his people.

Diarmuid went to the top of the fort, and put the shafts of his two javelins under him, and rose with an airy, very light, exceeding high, bird-like leap, until he attained the breadth of his two soles of the beautiful grass-green earth on the plain without, and Grainne met him. Then Diarmuid spoke, and what he said was: "I trow, O Grainne, that this is an evil course upon which thou art come; for it were better for thee have Fionn Mac Cumhail for lover than myself, seeing that I know not what nook or corner, or remote part of Erin I can take thee to now, and return again to the town, and Fionn will never learn what thou hast done." "It is certain that I will not go back," said Grainne, "and that I will not part from thee until death part me from thee. "Then go forward, O Grainne," said Diarmuid.

13. Diarmuid and Grainne went their ways after that, and they had not gone beyond a mile out from the town when Grainne said "I indeed am weary, O son of O'Duibhne." "It is a good time to weary, O Grainne," said Diarmuid, "and return now to thine own household again, for I plight the word of a true warrior that I will never carry thee, nor any other woman, to all eternity." "So needst thou not do," said Grainne, "for my father's horses are in a fenced meadow by themselves, and they have chariots; and return thou to them, and yoke two horses of them to a chariot, and I will wait for thee on this spot till thou overtake me again." Diarmuid returned back to the horses, and he yoked two horses of them to a chariot, and it is not told how they fared until they reached Beul atha luain.³²

14. And Diarmuid spoke to Grainne, and said: "It is all the easier for Fionn to follow our track, O Grainne, that we have the horses." "Then," said Grainne, "leave the horses upon this spot, and I will journey on foot by thee henceforth." Diarmuid got down at the edge of the ford, and took a horse with him over across the ford, and [thus] left [one of] them upon each side of the stream, and he and Grainne went a mile with the stream westward, and took land at the side of the province of Connaught. It is not told how they fared until they arrived at Doire dha bhoth, in the midst of Clan Riocaird³³; and Diarmuid cut down the grove around him, and made to it seven doors of wattles, and he settled a bed of soft rushes and of the tops of the birch under Grainne in the very midst of that wood.

15. As for Fionn MacCumhail, I will tell [his] tidings clearly. All that were in Teamhair rose out at early morn on the morrow, and they found Diarmuid and Grainne wanting from among them, and a burning of jealousy and a weakness [i.e., from rage] seized upon Fionn. He found his trackers before him on the plain, that is the Clanna Neamhuin, and he bade them follow Diarmuid and Grainne. Then they carried the track as far as Beul atha luain, and Fionn and the Fenians of Erin followed them; howbeit they could not carry the track over across the ford, so that Fionn pledged his word that if they followed not the track out speedily, he would hang them on either side of the ford.

16. Then the Clanna Neamhuin went up against the stream, and found a horse on either side of the stream; and they went a mile with the stream westward, and found the track taking the land by the side of the province of Connaught, and Fionn and the Fenians of Erin followed them. Then spoke Fionn, and what he said was: "Well, I wot where Diarmuid and Grianne shall be found now, that is in Doire dha bhoth." Oisin, and Oscar, and Caoilte, and Diorruing, the son of Dobhar Damhadh O'Baoisgne, were listening to Fionn speaking those words, and Oisin spoke, and what he said was: "We are in danger lest Diarmuid and Grainne be yonder, and we must needs send him some warning; and look where Bran is, that is the hound of Fionn Mac Cumhail, that we may send him to him, for Fionn himself is not dearer to him than Diarmuid; and, O Oscar, tell him to go with a warning to Diarmuid, who is in Doire dha bhoth;" and Oscar told that to Bran. Bran understood that with knowledge and wisdom, and went back to the hinder part of the host where Fionn might not see him, and followed Diarmuid and Grainne by their track until he reached Doire dha bhoth, and thrust his head into Diarmuid's bosom and he asleep.

17. Then Diarmuid sprang out of his sleep, and awoke Grainne also, and said to her: "There is Bran, that is the hound of Fionn Mac Cumhail, coming with a warning to us before Fionn himself." "Take that warning," said Grainne, "and fly." "I will not take it," said Diarmuid, "for I would not that Fionn caught me at any [other] time rather than now, since I may not escape from him." Grainne having heard that, dread and great fear seized her, and Bran departed from them. Then Oisin, the son of Fionn, spoke and said : "We are in danger lest Bran have not gotten opportunity nor solitude to go to Diarmuid, and we must needs give him some other warning; and look where Fearghoir is, the henchman of Caoilte." "He is with me," said Caoilte. Now that Fearghoir was so,³³ [that] every shout he gave used to be heard in the three nearest cantreds to him. Then they made him give three shouts, in order that Diarmuid might hear him. Diarmuid heard Fearghoir, and awoke Grainne out of her sleep, and what he said was : "I hear the henchman of Caoilte Mac Ronain, and it is by Caoilte he is, and it is by Fionn that Caoilte is, and this is a warning they are sending me before Fionn." "Take that warning," said Grainne. "I will not," said Diarmuid, "for we shall not leave this wood until Fionn and the Fenians of Erin overtake us:" and fear and great dread seized Grainne when she heard that.

18. As for Fionn, I will tell [his] tidings clearly. He departed not from the tracking until he reached Doire dha bhoth, and he sent the tribe of Eamhuin³⁴ in to search out the wood, and they saw Diarmuid and a woman by him. They returned back again where were Fionn and the Fenians of Erin, and Fionn asked of them whether Diarmuid or Grainne were in the wood. "Diarmuid is there," they said, "and there is some woman by him [who she is we know not], for we know Diarmuid's track, and we know not the track of Grainne." "Foul fall the friends of Diarmuid O'Duibhne for his sake," said Fionn, "and he shall not leave the wood until he shall give me satisfaction for every thing he has done to me."

19. "It is a great token of jealousy in thee, O Fionn," said Oisín, "to think that Diarmuid would stay upon the plain of Maenmhagh,³⁵ seeing that there is no stronghold but Doire dha bhoth, and thou too awaiting him." "That shall profit you nothing, O Oisín," said Fionn, "and well I knew the three shouts that Caoilte's servant gave, that it was ye that sent them as a warning to Diarmuid; and that it was ye that sent my own hound, that is, Bran, with another warning to him, but it shall profit you nothing to have sent him any of those warnings; for he shall not leave Doire dha bhoth until he give me eric for every thing that he hath done to me, and for every slight that he hath put on me." "Great foolishness it is for thee, O Fionn," said Oscar the son of Oisin, "to suppose that Diarmuid would stay in the midst of this plain, and thou waiting to take his head from him." "What [who] else cut the wood thus, and made a close warm enclosure thereof, with seven tight slender-narrow doors to it? And with which of us, O Diarmuid, is the truth, with myself or with Oscar?" quoth Fionn. "Thou didst never err in thy good judgment, O Fionn," said Diarmuid, "and I indeed and Grainne are here." Then Fionn bade the Fenians of Erin come round Diarmuid and take him for himself [i.e., reserve him for Fionn]. Thereupon Diarmuid rose up and stood, and gave Grainne three kisses in presence of Fionn and of the Fenians, so that a burning of jealousy and a weakness seized Fionn upon seeing that, and he said that Diarmuid should give his head for those kisses.

20. As for Aonghus an bhrogha,³⁶ that is, the tutor in learning of Diarmuid O'Duibhne, it was shown to him in the Brugh upon the Boinn³⁷ the extremity in which his foster-son, that is, Diarmuid, then was ; and he proceeded accompanying the pure-cold wind, and he halted not till he reached Doire dha bhoth.³⁸ Then he went unknown to Fionn or to the Fenians of Erin to the place wherein were Diarmuid and Grainne, and he greeted Diarmuid, and what he said was : " What is this thing that thou hast done, O son of O'Duibhne?" " This it is," said Diarmuid : " the daughter of the king of Erin has fled privily with me from her father and from Fionn, and it is not of my will that she has come with me." " Then let one of you come under either border of my mantle," said Aonghus, " and I will take you out of the place where ye are without knowledge, without perception of Fionn or the Fenians of Erin." " Take thou Grainne with thee," said Diarmuid, " but as for me, I will never go with thee ; howbeit, if I be alive presently I will follow thee, and if I be not do thou send Grainne to her father, and let him do her evil or good [treat her well or ill]."

21. After that Aonghus put Grainne under the border of his mantle, and went his ways without knowledge of Fionn or of the Fenians of Erin, and no tale is told of them until they reached Ros da shoileach, which is called Lumneach³⁹ now.

22. Touching Diarmuid, after that Aonghus and Grainne had departed from him, he rose as a straight pillar and stood upright, and girded his arms and his armour and his various sharp weapons about him. After that he drew near to a door of the seven wattled doors that there were to the enclosure, and asked who was at it. "No foe to thee is any man who is at it," said they [who were without], "for here are Oisín the son of Fionn, and Oscar the son of Oisín, and the chieftains of the Clanna Baoisgne together with us; and come out to us, and none will dare to do thee harm, hurt, or damage." "I will not go to you," said Diarmuid, "until I see at which door Fionn himself is." He drew near to another wattled door, and asked who was at it. "Caoilte the son of Crannachar Mac Ronain, and the Clanna Ronain together with him; and come out to us and we will give ourselves [fight and die] for thy sake." "I will not go to you," said Diarmuid, "for I will not cause Fionn to be angry with you for well-doing to myself." He drew near to another wattled door, and asked who was at it. "Here are Conan the son of Fionn of Liathluachra,⁴⁰ and the Clanna Morna together with him ; and we are enemies to Fionn, and thou art far dearer to us than he, and for that reason come out to us, and none will dare meddle with thee." "Surely I will not go," said Diarmuid, "for Fionn had rather [that] the death of every man of you [should come to pass], than that I should be let out." He drew near to another wattled door, and asked who was there. "A friend and a dear comrade of thine is here, that is, Fionn the son of Cuadhan mac Murchadha, the royal chief of the Fenians of Mumha⁴¹, and the Momonian Fenians together with him ; and we are of one land and one country with thee, O Diarmuid, and we will give our bodies and our lives for thee and for thy sake." "I will not go out to you," said Diarmuid, "for I will not cause Fionn to be displeased with you for well-doing to myself." He drew near to another wattled door and asked who was at it. "It is Fionn the son of Glor, the royal chief of the Fenians of Ulladh,⁴² and the Ultonian Fenians along with him ; and come out to us, and none will dare cut or wound thee." "I will not go out to you," said Diarmuid, "for thou art a friend to me, and thy father ; and I would not that ye should bear the enmity of Fionn for my sake." He drew near to another wattled door and asked who was at it " No friend to thee is any that is here," said they, " for here are Aodh beag⁴³ of Eamhuin, and Aodh fada⁴⁴ of Eamhuin, and Caol crodha⁴⁵ of Eamhuin, and Goineach⁴⁶ of Eamhuin, and Gothan gilmheurach⁴⁷ of Eamhuin, and Aoife the daughter of Gothan gilmheurach of Eamhuin, and Cua-dan lorgaire⁴⁸ of Eamhuin ; and we bear thee no love, and if thou wouldst come out to us we would wound thee till thou shouldst be like a gallan,⁴⁹ without respite." " Evil the company that is there," said Diarmuid, " O ye of the lie, and of the tracking, and of the one brogue ;⁵⁰ and it is not the fear of your hand that is upon me, but from enmity to you I will not go out to you." He drew near to another wattled door, and asked who was at it. " Here are Fionn the son of Cumhall, the son of Art, the son of Treunmhor O'Baoisgne, and four hundred hirelings⁵¹ with him ; and we bear thee no love, and if thou wouldst come out to us we would cleave thy bones asunder."⁵² " I pledge my word," said Diarmuid, " that the door at which thou art, O Fionn, is the first [i.e. the very] door by which I will pass of [all] the doors." Having heard that, Fionn charged his battalions on pain of their death and of their instant destruction not to let Diarmuid pass them without their knowledge. Diarmuid having heard that arose with an airy, high, exceeding light bound, by the shafts of his javelins and by the staves of his spears, and went a great way out beyond Fionn and beyond his people without their knowledge or perception. He looked back upon them and proclaimed to them that he had passed them, and slung his shield upon the broad arched expanse⁵³ of his back, and so went straight westward; and he was not long in going out of sight of Fionn and of the Fenians. Then when he saw that they followed him not, he returned back where he had seen Aonghus and Grainne departing out of the wood, and he followed them by their track, holding a straight course, until he reached Ros da shoi-leach.

23. He found Aonghus and Grainne there in a warm well-lighted hut,⁵⁴ and a great wide flaming fire kindled before them, with half a wild boar upon spits. Diarmuid greeted them, and the very life of Grainne all but fled out through her mouth with joy at meeting Diarmuid. Diarmuid told them his tidings from beginning to end ; and they ate their meal that night, and Dairmuid and Grainne went to sleep together until the day came with its full light on the morrow. Aonghus arose early, and what he said to Diarmuid was : “ I will now depart, O son of O’Duibhne, and this counsel I leave thee ; not to go into a tree, having [but] one trunk, in flying before Fionn ; and not to go into a cave of the earth to which there shall be but the one door ; and not to go into an island of the sea to which there shall be but one way [channel] leading ; and in whatever place thou shalt cook thy meal, there eat it not ; and in whatever place thou shalt eat, there lie not ; and in whatever place thou shalt lie, there rise not on the morrow.”⁵⁵ He took leave and farewell of them, and went his ways after that. Then Diarmuid and Grainne journeyed with the Siona,⁵⁶ on the right hand westward until they reached Garbh-abha na bh-Fiann,⁵⁷ which is called Leamhan now ; and Diarmuid killed a salmon on the banks of the Leamhan, and put it on a spit to broil. Then he himself and Grainne went over across the stream to eat it, as Aonghus had told them and they went thence westward to sleep. Diarmuid and Grainne rose early on the morrow, and journeyed straight westward until they reached the marshy moor of Finnliath,⁵⁸ and they met a youth upon the moor, and the feature and form of that youth was good, but he had not fitting arms or armour. Then Diarmuid greeted that youth, and asked tidings of him. "I am a young warrior, seeking a lord," quoth he, "and Muadhan is my name." "What wilt thou do for me, O youth?" said Diarmuid. "I will do thee service by day, and I will watch thee by night," said Muadhan. "I tell thee to retain that youth," said Grainne, "for thou canst not always remain without people [followers]." Then they made bonds of compact and agreement one with the other, and journeyed forth westward until they reached the Carrthach;⁵⁹ and when they had reached the stream, Muadhan asked Diarmuid and Grainne to go upon his back so that he might bear them across over the stream. "That were a great burden for thee," said Grainne. Then he [nevertheless] put Diarmuid and Grainne upon his back and bore them over across the stream. They journeyed forth westward until they reached the Beith,⁶⁰ and when they had reached the stream Muadhan did likewise with them, and they went into a cave of the earth at the side of Currach cinn adhmuid,⁶¹ over Tonn Toime;⁶² and Muadhan dressed a bed of soft rushes and of birch-tops under [for] Diarmuid and Grainne in the further part of that cave. He himself went into the next wood to him, and plucked in it a straight long rod of a quicken-tree; and he put a hair and a hook upon the rod, and put a holly berry upon the hook, and went [and stood] over the stream, and took a fish that cast. He put up the second berry, and killed the second fish; and he put up the third berry, and killed the third fish. He [then] put the hook and the hair under his girdle, and the rod into the earth, and took his three fish with him where Diarmuid and Grainne were, and put the fish upon spits. When it was broiled Muadhan said: "I give the dividing of this fish to thee, Diarmuid." "I had rather that thou shouldst divide it thyself," said Diarmuid. "Then," said Muadhan, "I give the dividing of this fish to thee, O Grainne." "It suffices me that thou divide it," said Grainne. "Now, hadst thou divided the fish, O Diarmuid," said Muadhan, "thou wouldst have given the largest share to Grainne; and had it been Grainne that divided it, it is to thee she would have given the largest share; and since it is I that am dividing it, have thou the largest fish, O Diarmuid, and let Grainne have the second largest fish, and let me have the smallest fish." (Know, O reader, that Diarmuid kept himself from Grainne, and that he left a spit of flesh uncooked in Doire dha bhoth as a token to Fionn and to the Fenians that he had not sinned with Grainne, and [know also] that he left the second time [i.e. again] seven salmon uncooked upon the bank of the Leamhan, wherefore it was that Fionn hastened eagerly after him.) They ate their meal that night, and Diarmuid and Grainne went to sleep in the further part of the cave, and Muadhan kept watch and ward for them until the day arose with its full light on the morrow.

24. Diarmuid arose early, and caused Grainne to sit up; and told her to keep watch for Muadhan, and that he himself would go to walk the country around. Diarmuid went his ways, and went upon the height of the next hill to him, and he stood gazing upon the four quarters around him; that is, eastward and westward, southward and northward. He had not been a long time there before he saw a great swift fleet, and a fearful company of ships, coming towards the land straight from the west; and the course that the people of the fleet took in coming to land was to the foot of the hill upon which was Diarmuid. Nine times nine of the chieftains of that fleet came ashore, and Diarmuid went to ask tidings of them; and he greeted them and enquired of them news, of what land or what country they were.

25. "We are the three royal chiefs of Muir n-locht,"⁶³ said they, "and Fionn MacCumhaill it is that hath sent for us to seek us, [because] a forest marauder,⁶⁴ and a rebellious enemy⁶⁵ of his that he has outlawed,⁶⁶ who is called Diarmuid O'Duibhne; and to curb him are we now come. Also we have three venomous hounds, and we will loose them upon his track, and it will be but a short time before we get tidings of him; fire burns them not, water drowns them not, and weapons do not wound them,⁶⁷ and we ourselves number twenty hundreds of stout stalwart⁶⁸ men, and each man of us is a man commanding a hundred. Moreover, tell us who thou thyself art, or hast thou any word of the tidings of the son of O'Duibhne?" "I saw him yesterday," said Diarmuid, "and

I myself am but a warrior who am walking the world by the strength of my hand and the temper of my sword; and I vow that ye will have to deal with no ordinary man if Diarmuid meets you." "Well, no one has been found [yet]," quoth they. "What are ye called yourselves?" said Diarmuid. "Dubh-chosach, Fionn-chosach, and Treun-chosach⁶⁹ are our names," said they.

26. "Is there wine in your ships?" quoth Diarmuid. "There is," they said. "If ye were pleased to bring out a tun of wine," said Diarmuid, "I would do a trick for you." Certain men were sent to seek the tun, and when it was come Diarmuid raised it between his two arms and drank a draught out of it, and the others drank the other part of it. After that Diarmuid lifted the tun and took it to the top of the hill, and he himself mounted upon it, and caused it to descend the steep of the hill until it reached the lower part of it, and he took the tun up against the hill again, and he did that trick three times in presence of the strangers, and remained himself upon the tun as it both came and went. They said that he was one that had never seen a good trick, seeing that he called that a trick; and with that there went a man of them upon the tun. Diarmuid gave the tun a stroke of his foot, and he [i.e. the stranger] fell to the ground before ever the tun began to roll; and the tun rolled over that young warrior, so that it caused his bowels and his entrails to come out about his feet.⁷⁰ Thereupon Diarmuid followed the tun and brought it up again, and the second man of them mounted upon it. When Diarmuid saw that, he gave it a stroke of his foot, and the first man had not been more speedily slain than was the second man of them. Diarmuid urged the tun up again, and the third man mounted upon it; and he too was slain like the others. Howbeit there were slain fifty of their people by Diarmuid's trick that day, and as many as were not slain of them went to their ships that night. Diarmuid went to his own people, and Muadhan put his hair and his hook upon his rod, and three salmon were killed by him. He stuck the rod into the ground, and the hair under his girdle, and takes the fish to Diarmuid and Grainne, so that they ate their meal that night; and Muadhan dressed a bed under Diarmuid and under Grainne in the further part of the cave, and went himself to the door of the cave to keep watch and ward for them until the clear bright day arose on the morrow.

27. Diarmuid arose at early day and beaming dawn on the morrow, and roused Grainne, and told her to watch for Muadhan. He went himself to the top of the same hill, and he had not been there long before the three chiefs came towards him, and he enquired of them whether they would practise any more feats. They said that they had rather find tidings of the son of O'Duibhne than that. "I have seen"⁷¹ a man who saw him to day," said Diarmuid; and thereupon Diarmuid put from him his weapons and his armour upon the hill, [every thing] but the shirt that was next his skin, and he stuck the Crann buidhe of Mananan⁷² upright⁷³ with its point uppermost. Then Diarmuid rose with a light, bird-like bound, so that he descended from above upon the javelin, and came down fairly and cunningly off it, having neither wound nor cut upon him.

28. A young warrior of the people of the green Fenians⁷⁴ said, "Thou art one that hast never seen a good feat since thou wouldst call that a feat;" and with that he put his weapons and his armour from him, and he rose in like manner lightly over the javelin, and descended upon it full heavily and helplessly, so that the point of the javelin went up through his heart and he fell right down to the earth. Diarmuid drew the javelin and placed it standing the second time; and the second man of them arose to do the feat, and he too was slain like the others. Howbeit, fifty of the people of the green Fenians fell by Diarmuid's feat on that day; and they bade him draw his javelin, [saying] that he should slay no more of their people with that feat, and they went to their ships.

29. And Diarmuid went to Muadhan and Grainne, and Muadhan brought them the fish of that night, so Diarmuid and Grainne slept by each other that night, and Muadhan kept watch and ward for them until morning.

30. Diarmuid rose on the morrow, and took with him to the aforesaid hill two forked poles out of the next wood, and placed them upright; and the Moralltach,⁷⁵ that is the sword of Aonghus an Bhrogha, between the two forked poles upon its edge. Then he himself rose exceeding lightly over it, and thrice measured the sword by paces from the hilt to its point, and he came down and asked if there was a man of them to do that feat. "That is a bad question," said a man of them, "for there never was done in Erin any feat which some one of us would not do." He then rose and went over the sword, and as he was descending from above it happened to him that one of his legs came at either side of the sword, so that there were made of him two halves of the crown of his head. Then the second man rose, and as he descended from above he chanced to fall crossways upon the sword, so that there were two portions made of him. Howbeit there had not fallen more of the people of the green Fenians of Muir n-Iocht on the two days before that, than there fell upon that day. Then they told him to take up his sword, [saying] that already too many of their people had fallen by him; and they asked him whether he had gotten any word of the tidings of the son of O'Duibhne. "I have seen him that saw him to-day," said Diarmuid, "and I will go to seek tidings to-night."

31. Diarmuid went where were Grainne and Muadhan, and Muadhan killed three fish for them that night; so they ate their meal, and Diarmuid and Grainne went to sleep in the hinder part of the cave, and Muadhan kept watch and ward for them.

32. Diarmuid rose at early dawn of the morning, and girt about him his suit of battle and of conflict; under which, through which, or over which, it was not possible to wound him; and he took the Moralltach, that is the sword of Aonghus an Bhrogha, at his left side which [sword] left no stroke nor blow unfinished⁷⁶ at the first trial. He took likewise his two thick-shafted javelins of battle, that is, the Ga buidhe, and the Ga dearg,⁷⁷ from which none recovered, or man or woman, that had ever been wounded by them. After that Diarmuid roused Grainne, and bade her keep watch and ward for Muadhan, [saying] that he himself would go to view the four quarters around him. When Grainne beheld Diarmuid with bravery and daring [clothed] in his suit of anger and of battle, fear and great dread seized her, for she knew that it was for a combat and an encounter that he was so equipped; and she enquired of him what he would do. ["Thou seest me thus] for fear lest my foes should meet me." That soothed Grainne, and then Diarmuid went in that array to meet the green Fenians.

33. They came to land forthwith, and enquired of him tidings of the son of O'Duibhne.

“I saw him long ago,” said Diarmuid. “Then shew us where he is,” said they, “That we may take his head before Fionn Mac Cumhaill.” “I should be keeping him but ill,” said Diarmuid, “an I did as ye say; for the body and life of Diarmuid are under the protection of my prowess and of my valour, and therefore, I will do him no treachery.” “Is that true?” said they. “It is true, indeed,” said Diarmuid. “Then shalt thou thyself quit this spot,” said they, “and we will take thy head before Fionn, since thou art a foe to him.” “I should doubtless be bound,” said Diarmuid, “when I would let my head [go] with you;” and as he thus spoke, he drew the Moralltach from its sheath, and dealt a furious stroke of destruction at the head of him that was next to him, so that he made two portions of it. Then he drew near to the host of the green Fenians and began to slaughter and to discomfort them heroically and with swift valour, so that he rushed under them, through them, and over them, as a hawk would go through small birds, or a wolf through a large flock of small sheep; even thus it was that Diarmuid hewed cross-ways the glittering very beautiful mail of the men of Lochlann, so that there went not from that spot a man to tell tidings or to boast of great deeds, without having the grievousness of death and the final end of life executed upon him,⁷⁸ but the three green chiefs and a small number of their people that fled to their ship.

34. Diarmuid returned back having no cut nor wound, and went his ways till he reached Muadhan and Grainne. They gave him welcome, and Grainne asked him whether he had gotten any word of the tidings of Fionn Mac Cumhaill and of the Fenians of Eire. He said that he had not, and they ate their food and their meat that night.

35. Diarmaid rose at early day and beaming dawn on the morrow, and halted not until he had reached the aforesaid hill, and having gotten there he struck his shield mightily and soundingly, so that he caused the shore to tremble with the noise [i. e. reverberate] around him. Then said Dubh-chosach that he would himself go to fight with Diarmuid and straightways went ashore. Then he and Diarmuid rushed upon one another like wrestlers, like men, making mighty efforts, ferocious, straining their arms and their swollen sinews, as it were two savage oxen, or two frenzied bulls, or two raging lions, or two fearless hawks on the edge of a cliff. And this is the form and fashion of the hot sore inseparable strife that took place betwixt them.

36. They both throw their weapons out of their hands, and run against and to encounter each other, and lock their knotty hands across one another's graceful backs. Then each gave the other a violent mighty twist; but Diarmuid hove Dubh-chosach upon his shoulder, and hurled his body to the earth, and bound him firm and fast upon the spot. Afterwards came Fionn-chosach and Treun-chosach to combat with him, one after the other; and he bound them with the same binding, and said that he would take their heads from them were it not that he had rather leave them in those bonds for an increase to their torments: "for none can loosen you," quoth he, and he left them there weary and in heavy grief.

37. As for him, he went to look for Muadhan and for Grainne; and they ate their meal and their meat that night, and Diarmuid and Grainne went to sleep, and Muadhan kept watch and ward for them until morning.

38. Diarmuid rose and told Grainne that their enemies were near them; and he told her the tale of the strangers from beginning to end, how three fifties of their people had fallen three days one after the other by his feats, and how fifteen hundred of their host had fallen on the fourth day by the fury of his hand,⁷⁹ and how he had bound the three green chiefs on the fifth day; "and they have three deadly hounds by a chain to do me evil," quoth he, "and no weapon wounds them." "Hast thou taken their heads from those three chiefs?" said Grainne. "I have not," said Diarmuid, "for I had rather give them long torment than short; for it is not in the power of any warrior or hero in Erin to loose the binding with which they are bound, but only four; that is Oisín the son of Fionn, and Oscar the son of Oisín, and Lughaidh of the mighty hand, and Conan Mac Morn; and I ween that none of those four will loose them. Nevertheless, Fionn will shortly get tidings of them, and that will sting his heart in his bosom; and we must depart out of this cave lest Fionn and the deadly hounds overtake us."

39. After this the company came forth out of the cave, and went their ways westward until they reached the moor of Finnliath. Grainne began to weary then, and Muadhan took her upon his back until they reached the great Sliabh Luachra.⁸⁰ Then Diarmuid sat him down on the brink of the stream which wound through the heart of the mountain ; and Grainne was washing her hands, and she asked Diarmuid for his skene⁸¹ to cut her nails.

40. As for the strangers, as many of them as were alive, they came upon the hill where the three chiefs were bound and thought to loose them right speedily, but those bonds where so [that] they [only] drew the tighter upon them.

41. They had not been long thus before they saw the female messenger⁸² of Fionn Mac Cumhaill coming with the speed of a swallow or weasel, or like a blast of a sharp, pure-swifted wind, over the top of every high hill and bare mountain towards them ; and she enquired of them who it was that had made that great, fearful, destroying slaughter of them. "Who art thou that askest?" said they. "I am the female messenger of Fionn Mac Cumhaill," said she ; "and Deirdre an Duibh-shleibhe⁸³ is my name, and it is to look for you that Fionn has sent me." "Well then we know not who he was," said they, "but we will inform thee of his appearance ; that is [he was] a warrior having curling, dusky-black hair, and two red ruddy cheeks, and he it is that hath made this great slaughter of us: and we are yet more sorely grieved that our three chiefs are bound and that we cannot loose them; he was likewise three days one after the other fighting with us." "Which way went that man from you?" said Deirdre. "He parted from us late last night," said they, "[therefore we cannot tell]." "I swear," said Deirdre, "that it was Diarmuid O'Duibhne himself that was there, and do ye bring your hounds with you and loose them on his track, and I will send Fionn and the Fenians of Erin to you."

42. Then they brought their hounds with them out of their ship, and loosed them upon the track of Diarmuid; but they left the druid⁸⁴ attending upon the three chiefs that were bound. As for them, they followed the hounds upon the track of Diarmuid until they reached the door of the cave, and they went into the hinder part of the cave, and found the bed of Diarmuid and Grainne there. Afterwards they went their ways towards the west till they reached the Carrthach, and thence to the moor of Finnliath, and to Garbh-abha na bh-

Fiann, which is called Leamhan now, and to the fair plain of Concon, and to the vast and high Sliabh Luachra.

43. Howbeit, Diarmuid perceived them not [coming] after him in that pursuit until he beheld the banners of soft silk, and the threatening standards, and three mighty warriors in the fore front of the hosts, full fierce, and bold, and dauntless, having their three deadly hounds by three chains in their hands. When Diarmuid marked them [coming] towards him in that guise, he became filled with hatred and great abhorrence of them. And there was a green well-dyed mantle upon him that was in the fore front of the company, and he was out far beyond the others: then Grainne reached the skene to Diarmuid, and Diarmuid thrust it upon his thigh, and said: "I trow thou bearest the youth of the green mantle no love, Grainne?" "Truly I do not," quoth Grainne, "and I would I never to this day had borne love to any." Diarmuid drew his skene, and thrust it into its sheath⁸⁵ and went his ways after that, and then Muadhan put Grainne upon his back and bore her a mile's length of the mountain.

44. It was not long before a hound of the three deadly hounds was loosed after Diarmuid, and Muadhan told him to follow Grainne, [saying] that he would ward off the hound from him. Then Muadhan went back and took a hound's whelp from beneath his girdle,⁸⁶ and set him upon his palm. Howbeit when he [the whelp] saw the hound [rushing] towards him, having his jaws and throat open, he rose from Muadhan's palm and sprang into the gullet of the hound, so that he reached the heart and rent it out through his side ; but he sprang back again upon Muadhan's palm, leaving the hound dead after him.

45. Muadhan departed after Diarmuid and Grainne, and took up Grainne again, and bore her another mile's length of the mountain. Then was loosed the other hound after them, and Diarmuid spoke to Muadhan, and what he said was : " I indeed hear that there can no spells be laid upon weapons that wound by magic,⁸⁷ nor upon the throat of any beast whatever,⁸⁸ and will ye stand until I put the Ga dearg through the body, the chest, and the heart of yonder [hound] ?" and Muadhan and Gráinne stood to see that cast. Then Diarmuid aimed a cast at the hound, and put the javelin, through his navel, so that he let out his bowels and his entrails, and having drawn the javelin he followed his own people.

46. They had not been long after that before the third hound was loosed upon them; Grainne spoke, and what she said was: "That is the fiercest of them, and I greatly fear him, and keep thyself well against him, O Diarmuid." It was not long before the hound reached them, and the place where he overtook them was Lic Dhubhain⁸⁹ on Sliabh Luachra. He rose with an airy, light bound over Diarmuid, and would fain have seized Grainne, but Diarmuid caught his two hind legs, and struck a blow of his carcase against the next rock, so that he let out his brains through the openings of his head and of his ears. Thereupon Diarmuid took his arms and his armour, and put his slender topped [i.e. tapering] finger⁹⁰ into the silken string⁹¹ of the Ga dearg, and aimed a triumphant cast at the youth of the green mantle that was in the fore front of the hosts, so that he slew him with that cast; he made also the second cast at the second man, and slew him; and the third man [he slew] likewise. Then, since it is not usual for defence [i.e. resistance] to be made after the fall of lords,⁹² when the strangers saw that their chiefs and their lords were fallen, they suffered defeat, and betook themselves to utter flight ; and Diarmuid pursued them, violently scattering them and slaughtering them, so that unless [perchance] any one fled over [the tops of] the forests, or under the green earth, or under the water, there escaped not of them a messenger nor a man to tell tidings, but the gloom of death and of instant destruction was executed upon every one of them except Deirdre of Duibh-sliabh, that is, the female messenger of Fionn Mac Cumhaill, who went wheeling and hovering [around] whilst Diarmuid was making slaughter of the strangers.

47. As for Fionn having heard the tidings of the green Fenians being bound by Diarmuid, he loudly summoned the Fenians of Erin ; and they went forth by the shortest ways and by the straightest paths until they reached the hill where the three chiefs were bound, and that was torment of heart to Fionn when he saw them. Then Fionn spoke, and what he said was : “ O Oisín, loose the three chiefs for me.” “ I will not,” said Oisín, “ for Diarmuid bound me not to loose any warrior whom he should bind.” “ O Oscar, loose them,” said Fionn. "Nay," said Oscar, "I vow that I would fain put more bonds upon them." The son of Lughaidh and Conan refused likewise to loose them. Howbeit, they had not been long at this discourse before the three chiefs died of the hard bonds that were on them. Then Fionn [caused to be] dug three wide-sodded graves for them; and their flag was put over their grave-stone, and their names were written in Ogham craobh, and their burial ceremony was performed,⁹³ and weary and heavy in heart was Fionn after that.

48. At that very time and hour Fionn saw [coming] towards him Deirdre of Duibhshliabh, with her legs failing, and her tongue raving, and her eyes dropping in her head; and when Fionn saw her [come] towards him in that plight he asked tidings of her. "I have great and evil tidings to tell thee, and methinks I am one without a lord;"⁹⁴ and she told him the tale from first to last of all the slaughter that Diarmuid O'Duibhne had made, and how the three deadly hounds had fallen by him; "and hardly I have escaped myself," quoth she. "Whither went the son of O'Duibhne?" said Fionn. "That I know not," said she. And then Fionn and the Fenians of Erin departed, and no tidings are told of them until they reached Almhuin of Laighean.

49. Touching Diarmuid and Grainne, a further tale is told. They went their ways eastward to Sliabh Luachra, and through Ui Chonaill Gabhra,⁹⁵ and thence with their left hand to the Siona eastward to Ros da shoileach, which is called Luimneach now, and Diarmuid slew [for] them that night a wild deer; then they ate and drank⁹⁶ their fill of flesh and pure water, and slept till morn on the morrow. Muadhan rose early, and spoke to Diarmuid, and what he said was that he would now depart. "Thou shouldst not do so," said Diarmuid, "for all that I promised thee it has been fulfilled to thee without dispute." Muadhan did not suffer him to hinder him, and took leave and farewell of them, and left them on the spot, and gloomy and grieved were Diarmuid and Grainne after Muadhan.

50. After that they journeyed on straight northward towards Sliabh Echtghe,⁹⁷ and thence to the cantred of Ui Fhiachrach,⁹⁸ and as they passed through that cantred Grainne wearied; and when she considered that she had no man to carry her but Diarmuid, seeing that Muadhan was departed, she took heart and began to walk by Diarmuid's side boldly,

When they were come into the forest Diarmuid made a hunting booth,⁹⁹ in the very heart of the forest, and slew a wild deer that night; so that he and Grainne ate and drank their fill of flesh and pure water. Diarmuid rose early and went to the Searbhan Lochlannach,¹⁰⁰ and made bonds of covenant and compact with him, and got from him license to hunt and to chase, so that he never would meddle with his berries.

51. As for Fionn and the Fenians, having reached Almhuin, they were not long before they saw fifty warriors [coming] towards them, and two that were tall, heroic, actively valiant, [and] that exceeded the others for bulk and beauty in the very front of that company and troop; and Fionn enquired of the others [i.e. the Fenians] whether they knew them. "We know them not," said the others, "and canst thou tell thyself [who they are],

O Fionn?" "I cannot," said Fionn; "howbeit I think they are enemies to me." That company of warriors came before Fionn during that discourse, and they greeted him. Fionn answers them and asks tidings of them, from what land or region they were. They told him that they indeed were enemies to him, and that their fathers had been at the slaying of Cumhall the son of Treunmhor O'Baoisgne at the battle of Cnucha, "and they [i.e. our fathers] themselves fell for that act;¹⁰¹ and it is to ask peace of thee we are now come."

"How were ye yourselves when your fathers were slain?" said Fionn. "In our mother's womb," said they, "and our mothers were two women of the Tuatha De Danann, and we think it time to get our father's place and station among the Fenians."¹⁰² "I will grant you that," said Fionn, "but ye must give me eric¹⁰³ for my father." "We have no gold, nor silver, nor riches, nor various wealth, kine or cattle-herds, which we might give thee, O Fionn." "Ask of them no eric, O Fionn," said Oisín, "beyond the fall of their fathers in eric of thy father." "Methinks," said Fionn, "were one to kill me that it would be an easy matter to satisfy thee in my eric, O Oisín; and none shall come among the Fenians but he that shall give me eric for my father." "What eric askest thou?" said Aonghus the son of Art og Mac Morna. "I ask but the head of a warrior, or the full of a fist of the berries of the quicken-tree of Dubhros."¹⁰⁴ "I will give you good council, O children of Moirne," said Oisin, "that is to return where ye were reared, and not to ask peace of Fionn as along as ye shall live; and it is no light matter for you to bring to Fionn aught that he is asking of you, for know ye what head that is which Fionn asks you to bring him in eric?" "We know not," said they. "The head of Diarmuid O'Duibhne is that head that Fionn asks of you, and were ye as many in number as twenty hundred men of full strength, Diarmuid O'Duibhne would not let that head [go] with you which Fionn asks of you, that is, his own head." "What berries are they that Fionn asks of us?" said they. "Nothing is more difficult for you to get than that," said Oisin, as I will tell you now."

52. "There arose a dispute between two women of the Tuatha De Danann, that is, Aoife the daughter of Mananan, and Aine the other daughter of Mananan, the son of Lear, viz.,

Aoife had become enamoured of the son of Lughaidh, that is, sisters's son to Fionn Mac Cumhaill, and Aine had become enamoured of Lear of Sith.Fhionnchaidh,¹⁰⁵ so that each woman of them said that her own man was a better hurler than the other; and the fruit of that dispute was that a great goaling match was set in order between the Tuatha De Danann and the Fenians of Erin, and the place where that goal was played was upon a fair plain by Loch Lein of the rough pools.

53. "The Fenians of Erin and the Tuatha Da Danann answered that tryste, and these are the noblest and proudest of the Tuatha De Danann that came there,¹⁰⁶ namely, the three Garbhs of Sliabh Mis,¹⁰⁷ and the three Mases of Sliabh Luachra, and the three yellow-haired Murchadhs, and the three Eochaidhs of Aine,¹⁰⁸ and the three heroic Laoghaires, and the three Conals of Collamhan, and the three Fionns of Fionnmhur,¹⁰⁹ and the three Sgals of Brugh,¹¹⁰ and the three Ronans of Ath na riogh,¹¹¹ and the three Eoghans from Eas ruaidh mhic Bhadhairn,¹¹² and an Cathbhuilleach,¹¹³ and the three Fearghuses, and an Glas of Magh Bhreagh,¹¹⁴ and an Suirgheach suairc from Lionan,¹¹⁵ and an Mheidhir from Beann-liath, and Donn¹¹⁶ from Sith Breagh,¹¹⁷ and Fear an bheurla bhinn from the Boinn,¹¹⁸ and Colla crionchosach from Bearnan Eile,¹¹⁹ and Donn dumhach,¹²⁰ and Donn an oileain,¹²¹ and Donn of Cnoc na n-os,¹²² and Donn of Leinchnoc,¹²³ and Bruithe abhac,¹²⁴ and Dolbh the bright-toothed, and the five sons of Fionn from Sith Chairn Chaoín,¹²⁵ and an t-Ilbhreac,¹²⁶ son of Mananan, and Neamhanach the son of Aonghus,¹²⁷ and Bodhbh dearg the son of an Deaghdha, and Mananan the son of Lear, and Abhortach¹²⁸ the son of an t-Ioldathach,¹²⁹ and Fioghmuin of Fionnmhur, and many others who are not enumerated here.

“ We, the Fenians of Erin, and they were for the space of three days and three nights playing the goal from Garbhabha na bh-Fiann which is called Leamhan, to Cromghleann na bh-Fiann,¹³⁰ which is called Gleann Fleisge now ; and neither [party] of us won a goal. Now [the whole of] the Tuatha De Danann were all that time without our knowledge on either side of Loch Lein, and they understood that if, we, the Fenians, were united, [all] the men of Erin could not win the goal of us. And the counsel which the Tuatha De Danann took, was to depart back again and not to play

[out] that goal with us. The provision that the Tuatha De Danann had brought with them from Tir Tairngire¹³¹ was this; crimson nuts, and catkin apples, and fragrant berries; and as they passed through the cantred of Ui Fhiachrach by the Muaidh,¹³² one of the berries fell from them, and a quicken-tree grew out of that berry, and that quicken-tree and its berries have many virtues;¹³³ for no disease or sickness seizes any one that eats three berries of them, and they [who eat] feel the exhilaration of wine and the satisfying of old mead; and were it at the age of a century, he that tasted them would return again to be thirty years old.

55. "When the Tuatha De Danann heard that those virtues belonged to the quicken-tree, they sent from them a guard over it, that is, the Searbhan Lochlannach, a youth of their own people, that is, a thick-boned, large-nosed, crooked-tusked, red-eyed, swart-bodied giant of the children of wicked Cam, the son of Naoi,¹³⁴ whom neither weapon wounds, nor fire burns, nor water drowns, so great is his magic. He has but one eye only¹³⁵ in the fair middle of his black forehead, and [there is] a thick collar of iron round that giant's body, and he is fated not to die until there be struck upon him three strokes of the iron club that he has. He sleeps in the top of that quicken-tree by night, and he remains at its foot by day to watch it ; and those, O children of Moirne, are the berries which Fionn asks of you," said Oisin. "Howbeit, it is not easy for you to meddle with them by any means ; for that Searbhan Lochlannach has made a wilderness of the cantreds around him, so that Fionn and the Fenians dare not chase or hunt there for the dread of that terrible one."

NOTES.

N O T E S .

² Almhuin. The Hill of Allen, five miles to the north of the town of Kildare. Here was the chief abode of the kings of Leinster. A battle was fought here A.D. 526; and again in 722, by Fearghal, son of Maelduin, son of Macfithreach, King of Ireland, against Dunchadh, son of Murchadh, and Aedh, son of Colgan, heir to the sovereignty. Almhuin is to be distinguished from Ailleann, now called in English Knockaulin, near Old Kilcullen, in the county of Kildare, upon which there are yet the remains of an old fort. The two places are mentioned together in a poem on the death of Cearbhall, son of Muirigen, King of Leinster, A.D. 904.

“Uaí ċ liomra ċnoc Almaine
Agur Ailleann cen ócca.”
 Sorrowful to me the Hill of Allen
 And Ailleann without youths (i.e. warriors).
Vid. An. Four Mast.

Another seat of the kings of Leinster was Naas in the county of Kildare, which is also mentioned in the same poem. Modern poets have not been as panegyric, if we may judge from a rhyme of the mail-coach days :—

“The town of Naas is a horrid place, Kilcullen’s twice as bad;
 But d— me if I ever saw the like of Kinnegad.”

³ Faitche. This word at present means a fair-green, not a plain in general.

⁴ This name has been very correctly anglicised (Ossian) from the pronunciation of the Highlanders, according to the flat sound of their short o, (that of o in stop), and their tendency to throw back the accent. The Irish sound the short o as u in tub, nut, and in certain classes of words accentuate the last syllable, hence they pronounce the name Usheen. As the English, however, have the same tendency as the Highlanders to shorten vowels and throw back the accent, it is likely that Oisin would still have been anglicised Ossian even had the word first become known to them by means of the Irish pronunciation.

⁶ Oileanach. This is an adjective, and may mean either insular, or abounding in islands.

7 Cormac. Cormac is first mentioned by the Four Masters in the year 225. In this year he caused to be slain Lughaidh, the son of Maicniadh (surnamed Mac Con, having been suckled by a stag-hound), who had reigned over Ireland for thirty years, and who had killed Cormac's father, Art, A.D. 195 (other authorities, however, vary the length of his reign). According to the same annals Cormac became King of Ireland, A.D. 227, and died in 266, being choked by a salmon-bone which stuck in his throat; "on account of the Siabh-radh [evil spirit] which Maelgenn, the Druid, incited at him, after he had turned against the druids, on account of his adoration of God in preference to them." The feud betwixt Fionn and King Cormac was this. Conn of the hundred battles had in the year 122, aided by the Luaighni of Teamhair, (a tribe in Meath), slain Cathaoir mor, King of Ireland, at the battle of Magh h-Agha; and had created Criomhthan, the son of Niachorb, King of Leinster, to the exclusion of the race of Cathaoir mor. Cumhall, grandson of Baoisgne, who was at that time chief of the Fenians of Leinster, called Clanna Baoisgne, i.e. children or tribes of Baoisgne, determined to restore the power of the race of Cathaoir mor, and accordingly, together with the men of Munster, gave battle to Conn of the hundred battles at Cnucha (now Castleknock in the county of Dublin) in Magh Life. In this battle Cumhall, who was the father of Fionn, was killed by Goll mac Morna, chief of the clanna Moirne, (children or clan of Morna) the Fenians of Connacht. Hence there was enmity between Fionn, the son of Cumhall, and Cormac, the grandson of Conn. The battle of Cnucha forms the subject of a romance.

8 This, of course, should have been the first clause in the sentence. Such errors are not to be attributed to any defect in the idiom of the language, but to a total disregard of style in the writer.

⁹ Literally, their departing, or proceeding, is not related. A constant phrase also in the Irish Annals, and which is seldom varied, where the more polished writers of other languages use many periphrases, as, to make a long story short, we next find them at such a place, &c.

¹⁰ ΔΟΝΑΔ ΔΓΥΡ ΟΙΡΕΔΕΤΑΡ. In the language of the present day ΔΟΝΑΔ means a fair. ΟΙΡΕΔΕΤΑΡ, which is derived from οίρεαδτ, a clan or tribe, is still remembered (according to Dr. O'Donovan), in the county of Donegal as meaning an assembly convened by a chief. The English writers of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries call them "iraghtes or parles."

¹² Grianan. This word is derived from Grian, the sun. Its primary and derived meanings are thus given by Dr. O'Donovan (Battle of Magh Rath, p. 7, n.) 1. A beautiful sunny spot. 2. A bower or summer-house. 3. A balcony or gallery. 4. A royal palace. From an extract which he gives from the Leabhar na h-Uidhre, a MS. of the twelfth century, it is evident that the name was given to a palace from the windows of glass with which it was furnished. The author of the battle of Magh Rath says, that Domhnall the son of Aedh, &c. son of Niall of the nine hostages, when building a palace in the place of his choice upon the Boyne, laid it out after the manner of the palace of Tara; amongst the buildings of which he enumerates this dwelling or palace of the women, viz. ΓΡΙΑΝΑΝ ΙΝ ΕΝ ΥΔΙΤΗ, Ψ ΕΡΙΘΕ ΒΟ ΜΥΓΝΕΘ ΛΑ ΟΡΜΑC ΜΑC ΔΙΡΤ ΔΙ ΤΥΡ ΒΙΔ ΙΝΓΙΝ .1. ΒΟ ΓΡΙΑΝΝΕ, i.e. The Grianan of one pillar, which had been first built by Cormac the son of Art for his daughter, that is, for Grainne.

13 Διῖρο (aird) is a point of the compass. The word is found in the Lowland Scotch dialect, as, "Of all the airts the wind can blow."—Burns; "Bestow on ev'ry airth a limb."—Montrose.

14 This was the name of the banquetting-hall at Tara.

15 He became king of Ireland, A.D. 268. Tighernach says that he immediately succeeded his father, but the Annals of Clonmacnoise and the Four Masters state that Eochaidh Gonat was king during 267, when he was slain by Lughaidh Meann, son of Aenghus of Ulster. Keating says that Cairbe was called "Liffeachair," having been fostered near the river Liffey. He was slain in the battle of Gabhra, and the romantic account is that he fell by the spear of Oscar, the son of Oisín whom he also killed (vid. Battle of Gabhra, p. 48). The Four Masters, however, say he was killed by Simeoin, son of Cairb, one of the Fotharta of Leinster, (vid. Four Masters, A.D. 284. n. c. Ed. J. O'D.)

16 Daire duanach, i.e., Daire of the duans or poems.

17 The Irish have always been fond of soubriquets, many of which they derive from personal peculiarities; of which several examples are found in this tale. The practice is still prevalent amongst the peasantry.

18 Ballach means freckled, from ball a mark or spot; but it here refers to that once celebrated freckle or mole which Diarmuid had upon his face, called his ball seirce, or love-spot, the sight of which acted as a philtre on all women who looked upon it. This spot is still vividly remembered in tradition, and it is believed to have had so potent a charm that Diarmuid is now known as Diarmuid na m-ban, Diarmuid of the women. The legend probably amounts to this, that Diarmuid was a warrior of surpassing strength or beauty, and had upon his face some mole or dimple which became him very much. (Ball means a limb and a place as well as a mark; the two last meanings are also combined in the English word spot.)

19 From ciar, swarthy, dark, and dubh, black. From this compound word is derived the proper name Ciardhubhan, meaning a swarthy, black-haired man, hence the patronymic O'Ciardubhain, anglice Kirwan. This latter is now commonly pronounced O'Ciarabhain in Irish, which has afforded a pretext to those of that name who wish to make it appear that they are of English descent, for saying that they were originally called Whitecombe, which is in Irish Cior bhan. (Vid. "Tribes and Customs of Hy Fiachrach," p. 47, n. a., where Dr. O'Donovan also exposes another attempt to conceal an Irish origin.) These remarks are not strictly in place here, but they may be excused for the sake of exposing as widely as possible all such silly and unnational efforts to suppress native names. The prevailing taste for foreign things may, perhaps, in some degree warrant these disguises as mere tricks of trade on the parts of actors and musicians, as in the case of a worthy man who some years ago drove a good trade in Cheltenham as a dancing master, under the attractive name of Signor Senecio, being all the time, as was at length discovered, one Mr. O'Shaughnessy. He wore a foreign name as an actor wears his tinsel, for a livelihood; but the D'Arcys and others have not this excuse.

20 CORCRA. This word (corcra) is the same as the Latin purpura, (Welsh porffor, porphor), and affords a good example of the substitution of c in the Gaelic, for the p of the Latin and Welsh, as in clumh, L. pluma, W. pluf. Casg. L. Pasch, W. Pasc. The following are a few examples of c and p in cognate Gaelic and Welsh words; Ceann, W. pen. Cran, W. pren, Clann (old form, cland), W. plant, Mac, W. mab, Ceasachd, W. pas, Ceathair, W. pedwar, Cach, W. pawb. Gach, W. pob, Cre, gen. cridah, W. pridd, Cnumh, W. pryf.

21 CΔOPΘEAPΣ, i.e., berry-red. CΔOPΘEAPΣ is vulgarly pronounced CΠΔOPΔΣ, and hence is often written by ignorant scribes $\epsilon\rho\alpha\omicron\upsilon\beta\acute{\omicron}\epsilon\alpha\rho\zeta$. The berry, which is such a favourite simile with the Irish in speaking of lips and cheeks, is that of the rowan-tree, which is called $\rho\alpha\rho\tau\alpha\iota\mu\mu\ \acute{\omicron}\epsilon\alpha\rho\zeta$ (Vid. Battle of Magh Rath, p. 64, and Feis tighe Chonaine, p. 124, where it is specified.)

²³ An English writer would have said, "which she had left in the Grianan," or, "which was kept in her Grianan;" but the above is the Irish idiom.

$\Delta\rho\alpha\iota\epsilon\ \upsilon\omicron\ \rho\iota\lambda\alpha\tau\alpha\iota\upsilon\beta\ \upsilon\alpha\ \mu\text{-}\Theta\upsilon\beta\upsilon\acute{\alpha}$, $\zeta\upsilon\rho\ \alpha\mu\ \zeta\alpha\iota\rho\mu\ \upsilon\omicron\ \beta\epsilon\rho\mu\ \lambda\epsilon\alpha\beta\alpha\iota\rho\ \alpha\iota\rho\upsilon\rho\iota\mu\ \upsilon\omicron\iota\upsilon\beta$. $\text{.1.}\ \zeta\alpha\iota\rho\mu\ \rho\iota\omicron\zeta$, $\alpha\zeta\upsilon\rho\ \zeta\iota\acute{\omicron}\ \epsilon\omicron\iota\mu\iota\zeta\epsilon\alpha\epsilon$ $\rho\iota\mu\ \alpha\mu\mu$, $\mu\eta$, $\beta'\epsilon\alpha\acute{\omicron}\ \text{'m}\ \alpha\mu\ \alpha\mu\ \rho\iota\mu\ \alpha\zeta\ \zeta\alpha\omicron\iota\upsilon\delta\epsilon\lambda\upsilon\iota\beta$, $\upsilon\omicron\ \rho\acute{\epsilon}\rho\ \alpha\ \mu\text{-}\upsilon\iota\zeta\iota\upsilon\beta\ \rho\epsilon\mu\ \alpha\mu\ \upsilon\alpha\iota\rho\ \rho\iota\mu$, $\alpha\zeta\upsilon\rho\ \upsilon\omicron\ \rho\acute{\epsilon}\rho\ \epsilon\iota\epsilon\alpha\acute{\omicron}$ $\epsilon\iota\epsilon\ \rho\acute{\omicron}\rho$; $\rho\epsilon\upsilon\epsilon\ \rho\acute{\epsilon}\rho\iota\upsilon\ \epsilon\acute{\alpha}\mu\zeta\alpha\tau\tau\alpha\rho\ \epsilon\lambda\alpha\mu\ \iota\eta\rho\alpha\epsilon\ell\ \zeta\omicron\ \epsilon\iota\rho\ \epsilon\alpha\iota\rho\mu\mu\zeta\iota\rho\epsilon\ \zeta\omicron\ \mu\text{-}\beta\acute{\alpha}\tau\alpha\rho\ \epsilon\rho\iota\omicron\chi\alpha\ \rho\iota\omicron\zeta\ \text{.1.}\ \mu\text{-}\acute{\epsilon}\mu\ \rho\acute{\epsilon}\ \alpha\rho\ \alpha\mu\ \epsilon\iota\rho\ \rho\iota\mu$, $\alpha\zeta\upsilon\rho\ \zeta\alpha\mu\ \mu\acute{\iota}\ \alpha\rho\ \mu\acute{\omicron}\ \iota\mu\alpha\ \upsilon\acute{\alpha}\ \acute{\epsilon}\epsilon\upsilon\ \mu\iota\epsilon\ \alpha\rho\ \rho\alpha\upsilon\ \alpha\zeta\upsilon\rho\ \epsilon\alpha\omicron\zeta\alpha\upsilon\ \mu\iota\epsilon\ \alpha\rho\ \lambda\epsilon\alpha\tau\alpha\upsilon\ \mu\mu\tau\epsilon\ \mu\eta\ell$. i.e. Here follow some of the chieftains of the O'Dubhdas (now O'Dowds), with the title which historical books give them, namely the title of king; and though strange this appears at this day, it was not so then among the Gael, according to their own laws at that time, and according to other nations also. Behold, be- fore the coming of the children of Israel to the land of promise, how there were thirty kings together in that country, and it not more than two hundred miles in length, and fifty miles in breadth, etc. (See Tribes and Customs of Hy-Fiachrach, p 298.)

²⁷ Breaghmhagh, Latinised, Bregia was the name anciently applied to the plain extending from Dublin to Drogheda, embracing the present counties of Dublin and Meath.

²⁹ That is, the strong warriors who were the support of Tara.

³⁰ Literally, a door for stealing away through.

³¹ Geas. Sometimes the geasa, whether prohibitions or injunctions, were enforced by threats, as were those laid by Grainne upon Diarmuid above : and sometimes merely by an appeal to the warrior's honour, in which case they were called geada nác b-fulangaido fíorlaoicé, i.e. geasa which true heroes endure not ; that is to say, without obeying them.

³² The mouth of the ford of Luan, now called in English Athlone.

³³ That is, the Grove of the two huts in Clanrickard. The territory of Clanrickard comprised six baronies in the county of Galway, viz., Leitrim, Loughreagh, Dunkellin, Kiltartan, Clare, and Athenry.

33^a This idiom is abundantly introduced in English by the Irish ; as, it is the way he was ; it is how he was ; it is what he said was such and such a thing.

34 An Eamhuin, now called in English Navan, a well-known town in the county of Meath.

35 Maenmhagh. This was the name of a large level tract lying round Loughrea, in the county of Galway.

36 i.e. Aonghus of the Brugh.

37 The Brugh, or palace, upon the Boyne (called also Brugh na Boinne, or palace of the Boyne ; and in the Four Masters, A.M. 3371, simply an Brugh, the palace), a place near Stackallan Bridge, county of Meath. Dr. O'Donovan tells us that the Book of Leinster states that Daghdha Mor, who ruled over Ireland for 80 years, had three sons, Aenghus, Aedh, and Cormac ; who with him were buried at the Brugh, where the mound called Sidh an Bhrogha was raised over them. This Aenghus was held to be the presiding fairy of the Boyne.

38 Keating mentions a place called Ṭoipe óá Ḃaoit (Halliday's Ed. p. 380), and there are several townlands bearing the name of Derry in the county of Galway. It is probable that Ṭoipe óá Ḃoť was situated either at Derrywee, barony of Kiltartan, or at Derryvookeel or Derradda, both in the barony of Loughrea. Some copies read Ṭoipe óá Ḃaoť, which would be the locality named by Keating, and of which Ṭoipe óá Ḃoť is most probably a corruption.

39 Luimneach was originally the name of the Lower Shannon, e.g.

“ní beir luimnech fop a ṭpuim,”

The Luimneach bears not on its bosom,

(Poem in Four Masters, A.D. 662.)

But about the year 850 the name was applied not to the river but to the city. Ros da shoileach means the promontory of the two salloos, and was anciently the name of the site of the present city of Limerick (vide O'Flaherty's Ogygia.)

40 These were the commanders of the clanna Morna or Fenians of Connacht, who had a feud with Fionn.

41 Munster.

42 Ulster.

43 Short Aodh.

44 Tall Aodh.

45 The slender brave one.

46 The wounder.

47 The loud-voiced white-fingered.

48 The tracker.

49 Literally, we would make the wounding of a gallan of thee, an obscure phrase. A gallan, called in some districts dallan, is a druidical pillar-stone, and tradition says that the Fenians used to vie with each other in casting them beyond a mark. The tribe of Eamhuin must have meant either that they would render Diarmuid as dead as a gallan, or that they would dispose of him as easily as they would cast one.

50 An expression of great contempt.

51 Hirelings. The word amhus means a madman or violent person, and also a mercenary soldier; and amhsaine is mercenary service.

52 Literally, we would make opened marrow of you.

53 SouΔğ means an arch, as is evident from the use of the word in old manuscripts where rouΔğöörur is applied to the arched door of a church

54 Both is a hut or booth, and its diminutive bothan is a cabin. This word enters into the composition of many names of places in Ireland, as Teampall na seanbhoithe (Tembleshanbo, county of Wexford); Rath-bhoth (Raphoe, county of Donegal). The Scotch Highlanders have anglicised it by Bothie.

55 Aonghus meant by this that Diarmuid should change his place of sleeping during the night.

56 The Shannon. This anglicised form is taken from the genitive case of the Irish name, which is Sionann; it is also sometimes made Sionainne.

57 The rough river of the Fenians. The river Leamhan is called in English Laune, and flows from the lake of Killarney into the sea at Castlemaine harbour. Many of the loughs and rivers of Ireland are by tradition supposed to have had a miraculous origin, or to have suddenly appeared. The Four Masters mention under A.M. 4169 the sudden breaking forth of five rivers, and amongst them of the Leamhan, viz. :—"It was in the time of Sirna, also, that there happened the eruption of the Scirtach, in Leinster; of the Doailt in Crich Rois; of the Nith, in Magh Muirtheimhne; of the Leamhan, in Munster; and of the Slaine, in Ui Creamhthainn." The Scotch have anglicised the same name, Leven.

58 Finnliath. Now the river Lea, a small rivulet rising to the east of Tralee; and being supplied by several mountain streams, it discharges itself into Tralee bay, and is navigable up to that town at high water for boats.

58A τοποδαιμ, means literally to stop, but also signifies to hire, agreeing with the similar use of the French arrêter, and of the English retain.

59 Carrthack. The river Carra, as it is called in English, rises on the mountains of Dunkerron, and passing northerly through the country called Glencare, through several romantic glens, in some of which it forms very considerable lakes, it empties itself into the bay of Castlemaine.

60 Beith. Now the river Behy, in the parish of Glanbehy, the most eastern in the barony of Dunkerron.

61 Currach Cinn Adhmuid, i.e., the woody headland of the bog. Not identified.

62 Tonn Toime. Now Tomes, the seat of O'Sullivan Mor, who died early in the present century, situated at the west end of Castle-Lough, near Killarney; and now occupied by his descendants.

63 Muir n-Iocht, i.e., the Iccian Sea, so called probably from the Roman town in Gaul called Portus Iccius. It is thus mentioned by the Four Masters, A.D. 405. "After Niall of the nine hostages, son of Eochaidh Muighmheadhoin had been twenty-seven years in the sovereignty of Ireland, he was slain by Eochaidh, son of Enna Ceinnseallach, at Muir n-Iochd, i.e., The sea between France and England."

64 foḡ is an attack or plundering, hence foḡad a marauder. The term foḡad feadh is equivalent to ceatdarnac coille, a wood kern; or as he was called later, a wood tory, and simply a tory, meaning a rebel. The term arose from the Irish soldiery being reduced by war to live by plunder, and to shelter themselves in the forests.

65 feap oibfeirge means a rebel, as does oibfeapḡad, e.g., Four Masters, A.D. 1557. "Another hosting was made by the Treasurer into Fircall, to take vengeance upon Art O'Molloy for his protection of the wood kerns (na ceitirne coille) and other insurgents (na n-oibfeapccad)."

66 Outlawed. Literally, whom he [i.e., Fionn] has hiding. This is an Irish phrase meaning that Fionn had outlawed Diarmuid, and that consequently the latter was on his keeping. Another expression for the same is beic fad coilltib ag neac, (vide Caithreim Thoirdhealbhaigh). i.e., for one man to have another under the woods, hence to reduce him to be a wood kern or outlaw.

67 Literally, weapons do not become red upon them.

68 infeadhoma means of full and mature strength, hence, capable of wielding arms efficiently; from in, fit for, and feidm, an exertion or effort.

68A This phrase could not possibly be literally rendered into English.

69 The black-footed, the fair-footed, and the strong-footed.

70 Either Diarmuid must have been very cunning, or the stranger very stupid. His method of killing them, though efficacious, was scarcely fair.

71 Ro chonnarc. Dr. O'Donovan remarks that Irish grammarians have not hitherto noticed a peculiar form of the 1st pers. sing. of the past tense of the verbs ṁeirim and ṁigim, used by old writers, viz., ṁubairc, and ṁánaḡ. It should further be observed, however, that the same formation of this person is found also in the past tense of ṁóim, as in the text; and that these most ancient forms (which occur in the extracts published by Zeuss), are, excepting ṁánaḡ which is obsolete, those universally employed in the spoken language of the present day throughout Munster, instead of ṁubairc, ṁonnairc, and ṁubairc mé, ṁonnaírc mé.

72 i.e., The yellow shaft of Mananan, a spear which Mananan had given to Diarmuid. Mananan was the son of Lear, one of the chiefs of the Tuatha De Danann, and Lord of the Isle of Man.

73 Literally, standing after its staff. Similar to this is the expression, ṁo ṁuic ré Δ n-ṁuic ṁo ṁinn, he fell after his head, i.e., headlong.

74 So called from the colour of their armour or of their standards.

75 i.e. The great and fierce one.

76 Literally, which left no remnant of a stroke or blow; i.e., which was sure to kill.

77 i.e., The red shaft.

78 This mode of expression reads strangely enough in English, making it appear that none escaped but those who were killed. This, however, is the Gaelic idiom, and in Irish expresses clearly, that not one man, being without (i.e., having escaped) destruction, departed to tell his tale.

79 Literally, by the venom of his hand. The word nimh, poison or venom, and the adjective nimhneach derived from it, are commonly used to denote virulence, malice, violence, &c. Thus, when it is said that the strangers had with them three venomous hounds (tri cointe nimhe), it signifies merely that they were peculiarly fierce and deadly, not that their bite was actually poisonous like that of a serpent.

80 Sliabh Luachra, now called in English Slieve Lougher, is the name of the mountainous district around Castleisland, in the barony of Trughenackmy, county of Kerry. This region is famous in Irish story, and is remarkable in modern times as having produced three of the most favourite Irish poets of the last century, Egan O'Rahilly, Red Owen O'Sullivan (surnamed an bheil bhinn, of the sweet mouth), and Teigue gaelach O'Sullivan.

81 Skene. The word sgian now means any kind of knife, but formerly denoted the peculiar dirk which was one of the weapons of the Irish. It was frequently called sgian dubh, i.e., black knife, either from the usual colour of the haft, or from the fatal blow which it so often dealt. It has been rendered skene in the text, that being the word used by the English writers in speaking of the Irish dagger (vid. Temple's Irish Rebellion, 1641, passim). Their large dirk was called by the Irish meadog.

82 Eachlach means a horse-boy, hence messenger, or courier, and baneochlach is a female messenger. The old form of the word is bandachlach (Zeuss. Grammatica Celtica, p. 820).

83 i.e., Of the Black mountain.

84 Druid. Here the writer might more properly have said ban draoi, i.e., a female druid, which is equivalent to a witch, or sorceress.

85 Having previously only placed it bare in his girdle or some part of his dress.

86 This is the first and last appearance of this wonderful whelp, and is a pleasant instance of a Deus ex machina.

87 Literally, weapons of druid-wounding.

88 That is to say, that weapons which wound by enchantment can have no counter-spell laid on them to render them harmless, and that no beast can be rendered invulnerable in its throat.

89 i.e., The flag-stone of Dubhan.

90 In all personal descriptions the Irish writers, ancient and modern, lay great stress upon the shape of the hand, considering that it denotes gentle blood or the reverse.

91 Suaithnid, string. This must have been a string or loop attached to the shaft of a javelin to assist in hurling it, like the αγκύλη of the Greeks, and the amentum of the Romans.

92 The Irish are exceedingly fond of introducing proverbs and sententious remarks, even in conversation.

93 This is a usual formula of the Irish writers in describing the burial of warriors. The Ogham craobh, or branching Ogham, was one of the runic methods of writing practised by the ancient Irish, and so called from the fancied resemblance of its lines to the boughs of a tree.

94 It was a misfortune and a reproach amongst the Irish for a plebeian to be without a lord or chief, since he would be thus liable to any insult or oppression without having one to whom to look to obtain redress for him; for a chief was bound, in return for the support and maintenance given him by his people, to protect them all. This relation between the chief and his tribe is expressed in the old Irish saying put into the mouth of a clansman, "Spend me and defend me," (vide Spencer's View of the State of Ireland). Deirdre means to reproach Fionn, by saying, that since he was unable to defend his own they might as well be lordless.

95 This name may be anglicised Hy Connell Gaura. The district included the present baronies of Upper and Lower Connello, in the county of Limerick.

96 The verb caithim, which is here used singly to express eating and drinking, means to throw and to use. In the latter meaning it may be employed with any substantive, the sense varying accordingly ; so that it may signify to wear, to spend, to eat, to drink, &c. The peasantry frequently say "to use," meaning "to eat," e.g., "I could not use a bit."

97 A mountainous district in the county of Galway upon the borders of Clare. The name is now pronounced in Irish Sliabh Eachtaidhe, and is anglicised Slieve Aughty ; it is, however, on some maps incorrectly called Slieve Baughty.

98 Triucha ceud. This was formerly called a cantred in English, and was an extent of land equal to the modern barony or hundred. The name in the text signifies the barony of the descendants of Fiachra. This Fiachra was son of Eochaidh Muighmheadhoin, King of Ireland A.D. 358. Duaid Mac Firis, who wrote a minute account of the descent, territories, and customs of these tribes (printed by the Irish Arch. Soc.) says, Síol Fhiachraic, mic Eadac Muighmeadhóin, .i. uí Fhiachraic Muaidhe (i.e. u-tamadhóne annu, 1666), uí Amhalgaidh Iorruir, fir Ceara, uí Fhiachraic Aidhne, o'á n-geoircear annu Cineal Guaire, Cineal Aodha na h-Echtge, Coill Ua bh-Fhiachraic, maille le tír uí eile nac ainmneigcear do íb Fhiachraic annu. "The race of Fiachra, son of Eochaidh Muighmheadhoin. These are, the Hy Fiachrach of the Moy (where we are this day, 1666), the Hy Amhalgaidh of Iorrus, the men of Ceara, the Hy Fiachrac Aidhne, now called Cineal Guaire, Cineal Aodha na h-Echtge, Coill Ua bh-Fiachrach, together with other territories not considered as of the Hy Fiachrach at this day." The Hy Fiachrac of the Moy were in the counties of Sligo and of Mayo, and part of their former territory is now the barony of Tir Fhiachrac (anglice Tireragh), in the county of Mayo, which is the district to which Diarmuid and Grainne have arrived.

⁹⁹ Fian-bhoth, a hunting-booth. Fian in composition means, relating to the Fenians, hence, adapted for or belonging to hunting, which was their chief employment and pastime; thus fian-chosgair (Fenian slaughter) means a great hunting match. A hunting shed or booth was also called dumha, and dumha sealga.

¹⁰⁰ i.e., The bitter or surly one of Lochein [Denmark]. The history of this personage who is so abruptly introduced is given afterwards.

¹⁰² Their fathers had belonged to the Fenians of Connacht, i.e., the Clanna Moirne, who fought against the Clanna Baoisgne at the Battle of Cnucha, now called Castleknock, in the county of Dublin.

¹⁰³ Eric. The compensation due from one man to another for any injury done, the amount of which was regulated by the native or Brehon law.

¹⁰⁴ Ros means either a wood or a promontory, and enters largely into the composition of topographical names in Ireland. There is a place called Dubhros (Dooros) near Kinvara, barony of Kiltartan, county of Galway, but the locality in question was situated upon the river Moy, as appears at page 118.

¹⁰⁵ Sith Fhionnchaidh, i.e., the mound of Fionnchadh.

¹⁰⁶ Many of these names appear to be mere fictions of the writer, but some of them are celebrated in Irish mythology, and are still well remembered by tradition.

battle of Sliabh Mis was fought between them. Here fell Scota, the wife of Mileadh, and her grave is still pointed out in Gleann Scoithin in the same barony (vide Four Masters, A.M. 3500 and n). There is also a Sliabh Mis in the county of Antrim, which is called in English Slemmish.

108 Aine. In full, Cnoc Aine, i.e., the Hill of Aine, in the county of Limerick (anglice, Knockany). This hill, so famous in Irish legend, together with the adjacent district, was also called Aine Cliach. From the most remote times it has been believed that this Hill was the residence of Aine, daughter of Eogabhal, of the Tuatha De Danann, who was looked upon as queen of the fairies of south Munster, as Aoibheall (or more correctly Aoibhinn) of Craglea, near Killaloe, of the fairies of Thomond, or north Munster, and Una of those of Ormond. Knockany was also anciently called Carran Fearaidhe.

109 Fionnmhur, i.e., the white house.

110 An Brugh. This was the Brugh of the Boyne, already noticed. It was called also Brugh mhic an Oig, from Aonghus Og, who is mentioned in this tale.

111 Ath na riogh, i.e., the ford of kings, called in English Athenry, a well-known town in the county of Galway.

112 Eas ruaidh mhic Badhairn. The cataract of the red one, son of Badharn. The full name of this waterfall is Eas Aodha ruaidh mhic Bhadhairn, the cataract of red Aodh, son of Badharn; but it is often styled by the Irish writers simply Eas ruaidh, whence the English form Assaroe, now more commonly called the Salmon-Leap, on the Erne, at Ballyshannon. The Four Masters have the following notice at A.M. 4518:—"Aedh ruadh, son of Badharn, after he had been (the third time that he assumed the government) eleven years in the sovereignty of Ireland, was drowned in Eas ruaidh, and buried in the mound over the margin of the cataract; so that from him Sith Aedha [the mound of Aedh] and Eas Aedha are called."

113 Cath-bhuilleach. i.e., the Battle-striker.

114 Magh Bhreagh, the same as Breaghmhagh, the plain of Bregia, already noticed.

115 An Suirgheach suairc, i.e., the pleasant, or cheerful wooer. The Lionan here mentioned may be Lionan cinn mhara, called in English Leenane, now a town at the head of the Killary harbour, in Joyce's country.

116 Beann liath means the gray peak, but the Editor has not been able to identify the spot.

117 Donn. There were several of this name in Irish mythology. Sith Bhreagh, the mound of Breagh, was most probably in the plain of Bregia.

118 i.e., The man of the sweet speech or language, from the Boyne. Beurla means a language, but has for the last three centuries been used to denote the English language in particular.

119 i.e., Colla, the withered-legged. Eile is a district including part of the Queen's County and of Tipperary. Bearnan Eile (Barnanely), part of this tract, is now a parish in the barony of Ikerrin. This Colla probably lived on the mountain called Greim an Diabhail, i.e., The Devil's Bit.

120 Donn dumhach. Donn of the sandbanks. This Donn resided at the sandbanks at the mouth of the river Eidhneach, to the west of Ennistymon, in the county of Clare. Here are to be seen the remains of Caislean na Dumhcha (now called in Irish, Caislean na duimhche, and in English, Dough Castle), the ancient dwelling of the O'Connors, Lords of Corcomroe. Donn was held to be a very potent fairy chief, and in the last century, Andrew Mac Curtin, a poet of the county of Clare, finding himself neglected by those who had formerly been kind to him, wrote an address to Donn, asking his aid.

121 Donn an oileain, i.e., Donn of the Island.

122 Donn chnuic na n-os. Donn of the Hill of fawns (Knocknanoss, in the county of Cork). This hill is remarkable as being the place where Alasdrom Mac Domhnaill (Sir Alexander Mac Donnell), of the Antrim Mac Donnells, was slain in battle by the Baron of Inchiquin, in 1647. He, with some Irish auxiliary troops, had served in Scotland under Montrose, by whom he was knighted. He was known to the Irish and Highlanders as Colla Ciotach, Colla the left-handed, and to the English as Colkitto. The battle of Knocknanoss has been remembered by means of a pipe-tune, to which Mac Donnell's men are said to have marched that day. It is well known in the south as Mairseail Alasdroim, Alexander or Allister's march.

123 There is another Donn not mentioned here, though perhaps the most famous of all, i.e., Donn Firinne. He lived at Cnoc Firinne (Knockfierna), the hill of truth, in the west of the county of Limerick.

124 i.e., Bruithe, the dwarf.

125 The mound of the cairn of Caon.

126 i.e., The variously-spotted one. Bodhbh dearg was created king by the Tuatha De Danann, to the exclusion of Lear and other claimants, from which resulted "the death of the children of Lear." An Daghda (the old form), i.e., the good fire, was a surname given to Eochaidh Ollathair, who reigned for eighty years, having been made king, as the Annals say, A.M. 3371.

127 i.e., Aonghus an Bhrogha.

128 The bards and shanachies fancifully attributed to each of the Tuatha De Danann chiefs some particular art or department over which they held him to preside. Abhortach they considered to be the god or genius of music.

129 i.e., The many-coloured one.

130 i.e., The crooked valley of the Fenians. The river

Flesk, rising near the eastern borders of Kerry, flows with a winding course westward, through a very wild and mountainous country, into the Lake of Killarney. This tract is called Glenflesk, and hence O'Donoghue, the chief of it bore the title of O'Donoghue of the Glens, which is retained by his representative to this day.

131 i.e., The Land of Promise. This is an instance of the manner in which the Irish romancers draw upon biblical and other history, when they wish to introduce something particularly remote and mysterious.

132 Called in English the Moy, in the county of Sligo.

133 buadh. This word literally means a victory, hence the extraordinary powers or virtues of amulets, &c. Jewels are called clocha buadh, i.e., stones possessing virtue; probably from the ancient belief that gems were efficacious for the discovering and counteracting of poisons and spells.

134 i.e. Ham or Cham, the son of Noah. He is generally distinguished in Irish writings by the epithet collach, wicked, or, more strictly, incestuous.

135 Here we have a specimen of a character compounded from sacred and profane history. It is evident that the author had read of the Cyclops, but it is not as easy to determine where he found that any of the Clann Chaim choliaigh had settled in Lochlin. It must be confessed that the Irish romancers of the middle ages were not second in imagination to their brethren of the Continent, who also took many liberties with the personages of antiquity,

REPORT FOR 1879.

THE following report was read by the Secretary of Council at the meeting of Council, held on Tuesday, 2nd March, 1880 :—

IN presenting the Report for the year 1879, the Council have to congratulate the Society on its continued success. A detailed recital of the work done in furtherance of its object during the past twelve months will not be deemed necessary. Suffice it briefly to refer to the main facts which have been accomplished.

The movement for the preservation of the Irish language has advanced steadily, and continues to enlist the sympathy of everyone interested in the cultivation of the language and literature of Ireland, and in the prestige arising from the preservation of a valuable national inheritance.

It is very satisfactory to find that, notwithstanding many drawbacks, and amidst the many and absorbing questions now occupying public attention, the effort made to preserve our native tongue still meets with encouragement and support. It would be strange, indeed, were it otherwise, seeing the interest taken in it by strangers and foreigners, who are in no other way connected with our country or our race.

Considering the difficulties that had to be overcome, and the continued encouragement afforded to the promoters of the movement, we are justified in believing that its inherent merits and its hold on popular sympathy are such as will continue to evoke the enthusiasm and secure the aid of Irishmen, and that its motto in the future, as during the past three years, will be "Crescit eundo."

The permanent footing the language has obtained in our school systems at home, and the attention it has received abroad, warrant us in expecting that many, who are now only looking on, will soon feel impelled to interest themselves in the country's noble and valuable language.

The financial condition of the Society, notwithstanding the depressed state of the country, continues very satisfactory. The balance in the Society's favour on the 31st December last was £85. Considerable extra expense had to be incurred during the year for printing in connexion with the election in March, 1879, in publishing a pamphlet containing the names of members and other valuable information concerning the Society, and in forwarding circulars to national schools.

The Society's series of elementary books continues in great demand. During the year ending the 31st December, 5,071 copies of the First Irish Book have been sold, making a total issue of 31,071 copies; 2,075 copies of the Second Irish Book, making a total issue of 14,075, and the copy-book, for writing the Irish language in the Irish character, has had a sale of 1,209.

During the year the Society published a Third Irish Book, of which a first edition of 2,000 copies has been already sold, and a second edition of 3,000 copies is now almost exhausted.

A valuable publication, "Toruiheacht Dhiar- muda agus Ghrainne," has just been printed by the Society to meet the requirements of advanced pupils; and, owing to the action of this Council, it has been placed as a text-book on the Programme of the Commissioners of Intermediate Education for the present year. This book of about 210 pages, consisting of text, translation, notes, and a glossary, will form the first of a series of "Gaelic Reading Books," so much required by Celtic students.

Two Societies (the Craobh Ruadh and Gaelic Union) have been formed in Dublin, and numerous associations affiliated to the Society during the year, whilst the progress of the movement in America has exceeded the most sanguine expectations.

Memorials, which are likely to be attended with the happiest results, have been presented to the trustees of Maynooth College and the Board of National Education.

The Commissioners of National Education have asked and obtained permission to use the Society's books in printing cards for the use of their schools.

An excellent set of by-laws for the government of the Society has been drawn up.

Many valuable additions have been made to Irish literature by members of our Council, and an important report on the Celtic language has been contributed to the Statistical Society of London by Mr. Ravenstein, who acknowledges the assistance afforded him by this Society.

The Council have to regret the loss by death of the following distinguished members of their body—a loss not only felt by this Society but by all Ireland. Their services are so well known in connexion with the history and literature of the country as to preclude the necessity of doing more than simply mentioning their names, viz. :—Isaac Butt, Esq., M.P., a Vice-President of the Society; Right Rev. Dr. James MacDevitt, Bishop of Raphoe, also a Vice-President of the Society; James Morrin, Esq., Dangan House, Kilkenny; Jeseeph O'Longan, Esq., of the Royal Irish Academy; and Very Rev. C. W. Russell, D.D., President of Maynooth College.

In conclusion, the interest taken by the members of this Council in their weekly meetings is shown by the fact that the number of attendances during the past year has been considerably greater than that of any preceding year.

RULES.

THIS Society is instituted for the Preservation and Extension of the Irish as a Spoken Language.

1. This Society shall consist of a Patron, President, and four Vice-Presidents, with Members and Associates.
2. The qualification for Membership shall be an annual subscription of at least Ten Shillings, and for Associates, One Shilling.
3. The Society shall be governed by a Council, chosen from the Members, which Council shall consist of not less than thirty, including the President, Vice-Presidents, two Secretaries, and two Treasurers. Five Members of the Council to form a quorum.

4. The Presidents and Secretaries of Branch Associations, in connexion with the Society, shall be Members of the Council.
5. The Council shall have power to manage the affairs of the Society, and to make by-laws for the better regulation of its own proceedings.
6. The President, Vice-Presidents, and thirty Members of the Council shall be elected annually, on St. Patrick's Day, by means of voting-papers furnished to every Member of the Society.
7. The Treasurers and Secretaries shall be elected annually by the Council.
8. A General Meeting of the Society will be held annually at such time and place as shall be determined from year to year by the Council.

MEANS.

The object of the Society being the Preservation and Extension of the Irish as a Spoken Language, the following means are proposed for that end:—

1. To encourage a familiar use of the Language by those who know how to speak it, and to offer premiums for proficiency in the study of it.

- 2 To promote the formation of Classes wherever facilities exist.

3. To encourage the establishment of Parochial or other Associations.

4. To procure that the Irish Language shall be taught in the Schools of Ireland, especially in the Irish-speaking districts.

5. To publish cheap elementary works, from which the Language can be easily learned, and to furnish same at reduced prices to Classes and Associations in connexion with the Society.

6. To encourage the production of a Modern Irish Literature—original or translated.

In addition to the foregoing, the Society hopes soon to be in a position to publish a journal partly in the Irish tongue, for the cultivation of the language and literature of Ireland, and containing easy Lessons and Reports of the Transactions of the Society. The Council will also take such other measures as they may deem expedient to further the object of the Society.

LOCAL ASSOCIATIONS.

Some Local Associations already in course of formation have expressed willingness to be connected with the Society, being anxious to encourage union, which is a sure means of success. The Council have therefore drawn up a series of conditions which, while providing for united action, will yet leave each Association free to direct its own affairs. They also propose a "Plan of Rules" for the guidance of persons willing to form Associations.

PLAN OF RULES.

1. The Association to consist of a President, Vice-President, and Members.

2. The Association to be governed by a President, Vice-President, and Committee of* —

* Whatever number may be agreed on.

chosen from the Members of the Association, which Committee shall have power to receive members, to make by-laws for the regulation of their own proceedings, and appoint a Treasurer and Secretary. — Members* of Committee to form a quorum.

3. The qualification for Membership to be an annual subscription of — Shillings.†

4. The Committee to have power to establish Irish classes, and to adopt such other measures as they may deem fit to further the object of the Society.

5. The President, Vice-President, and Committee to be elected annually on St. Patrick's Day — a general meeting of the Association being held for that purpose.

Members of Associations and others can very materially aid the Society's work, and further the progress of the movement by enrolling Members and Associates of the Society‡ and forwarding subscriptions and lists of names to the Secretary of the Council, who will send card of Membership or Association to each Subscriber.

CONDITIONS OF AFFILIATION.

- I. An Association must consist of at least ten members, including President, Vice-President and Secretary.
- II. Two copies of the Rules of the Association to be forwarded to the Council of the Society in Dublin—one to be retained by the Coun-

† The sum to be fixed by the Committee of the Association.

‡ Special Cards have been prepared for this purpose, and will be forwarded to those willing to enrol Associates.

- cil, the other to be returned to the Association.
- III. The application for affiliation to be accompanied by a sum of not less than ten shillings. If the Association cannot be affiliated, this sum, with both copies of rules, shall be returned.
 - IV. After affiliation being granted, each Member of the Association to pay one shilling annually to the funds of the Society in Dublin.
 - V. The Secretary of the Association to furnish a half-yearly report to the Council of the Society.
 - VI. The President and Secretary of each Association accepting the above conditions shall be members of the Council of the Society.
 - VII. Each Member of an affiliated Association shall receive a certificate (or card) of associateship from the Council in Dublin.
 - VIII. An affiliated Association shall receive the Publications of the Society at a price considerably below that for which they are offered to the public. A Price List shall be sent to the Association.
 - IX. When funds permit, special premiums and prizes, for competition, shall be offered by the Council to classes in connexion with the Society.

NOTE I.—If in particular and exceptional cases the subscriptions mentioned above be considered too high, a statement to that effect made to the Council will be favourably considered.

NOTE 2.—To Colleges, Schools, and Classes will be forwarded, carriage free, the Publications of the Society, on receipt of an order for Five Shillings' worth, or more. All Book Orders to be sent to the Publishers, M. H. GILL & SON, 50 Upper Sackville-street, Dublin.

BY-LAWS,

MADE IN PURSUANCE OF RULE V. OF THE SOCIETY.

I.

COUNCIL—HOW CONSTITUTED.

THE Council of the Society shall be constituted as follows:—Thirty Members shall be elected by ballot; these at their first meeting shall co-opt fifteen others, and the Council thus formed shall have power to add ten more to their number within their year of office, not more than three Members, of whose names notice shall have been previously given, to be elected at any one meeting.

II.

ELECTION OF COUNCIL ANNUAL—MODE OF ELECTION.

The annual election of the Council shall be by ballot. Balloting-papers and the other necessary forms shall be sent to all Members of the Society resident in Great Britain and Ireland not later than the 7th of March; said papers to be returned to the Society not later than noon on the 17th day of the same month.

III.

A HOUSE LIST TO BE SENT OUT.

That along with the balloting-papers there shall be sent to the Members of the Society a house list of names of Members recommended by the Council for election to the offices of President and Vice-President, and to twenty seats on the Council; and that this list be drawn up at a meeting of the Council convened for that purpose, of which due notice shall be given by the Secretary.

IV.

VACANCIES ON COUNCIL—OFFICE HOLDERS.

The Council shall have power to fill up any vacancy that may occur in the Council of officers previous to the Annual Election; but the Members so elected shall hold the office so long only as it would have been held by the vacating Member if no vacancy had occurred.

V.

HON. MEMBERS—THEIR NUMBER.

That the Council shall have power to elect not more than ten persons in any year to be Honorary Members of the Society and of the Council; the ground of such election to be eminent character and known sympathy with the objects of the Society.

VI.

MEETINGS OF THE COUNCIL.

The Council of the Society for the Preservation of the Irish Language shall meet not less frequently than once a month. More frequent meetings may be held if they be deemed desirable by the Council. The day, hour, and place of meeting shall not at any time be altered by a vote of the Council, unless notice to effect such change shall have been given in the usual way.

VII.

SPECIAL MEETINGS OF THE COUNCIL.

Special meetings of the Council may be summoned at any time by the Secretary, on the requisition of five members; the summons to contain a notification of the business for which the meeting has been called.

VIII.

MINUTES OF COUNCIL TO BE KEPT.

That minutes be kept of the meetings of the Council, and that the minutes of each meeting be read as the first business of the next ensuing meeting of the Council.

IX.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

No motion unconnected with the business of the meeting, and of which notice has not been given, can be passed at any meeting of the Council, if it be objected to by any of the Members present.

X.

MOTION RELATING TO EXPENDITURE.

No motion involving a new expenditure of five pounds or upwards from the funds of the Society shall be passed at any meeting of the Council, unless notice of the same has been given in the manner hereinafter provided by these Rules.

XI.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

Notices of motion may be handed in at any ordinary meeting of the Council, and notification of the same shall be sent by the Secretary to all Members of Council residing within ten miles of Dublin at least two days before the date of the meeting at which they are to be considered. Five Members of the Council shall form a quorum.

XII.

SUB-COMMITTEES.

That the Council be subdivided into such Sub-committees as may be desirable, and may associate Ordinary Members on any such Sub-Committee. Three Members of such Sub-Committee to form a quorum.

XIII.

MEMBERS ENTITLED TO ELECT AND TO BE ELECTED.

No Member whose subscription for the year ending on the previous 31st December is unpaid shall be entitled to receive a ballot-paper or be eligible for election to the Council.

XIV.

MEMBERS TWO YEARS IN ARREAR LIABLE TO BE REMOVED.

Any Member of the Society whose subscription is more than two years in arrear, and who has twice been applied to for the amount, shall be liable to have his name removed from the list of the Society by a vote of the Council.

XV.

MEMBERS PAYING IN NOV. AND DEC. TO BE CONSIDERED AS PAYING FOR THE FOLLOWING YEAR.

Subscriptions become due on the 1st of January in each year; but the subscriptions of Members who join the Society during the months of November and December shall be regarded as paying to the end of the following year.

XVI.

SUBSCRIPTIONS—THEIR ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

Money received for the purposes of the Society shall be acknowledged without undue delay ; announcements of the same shall be made at the meeting of the Council next following its receipt, and a record thereof entered in the books of the Society.

XVII.

PAYMENT OF ACCOUNTS.

Bills presented for payment shall be brought before the Council by the Secretary, and, if approved of, shall be initialled by the Chairman, and passed to the Treasurers of the Society for payment.

XVIII.

SOCIETY'S ACCOUNTS TO BE AUDITED HALF-YEARLY.

The Council shall have the accounts of the Society audited half-yearly. Copies of the balance-sheet shall be obtainable by Members of Council and of the Society on making application for them.
